HUNDREDS DEAD

FAST EXPRESS IS BLOWN UP BY DYNAMITE!

Twenty Killed and 150 Injured in Train Wreck and Explosion on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Harrisburg To-day

Twenty persons reported dead, 150 injured, many fatally, and two trains and six residences destroyed, is the resord of a wreck at Harrisburg, Pa., early to-day.

Almost a score of bodies, most of them burned beyond all hope of recognition, have thus far been recovered. It is extremely improbable that other bodies will be found, as flames destroyed the wreck, with the remains of many victims.

In the fire many persons were burned to death before the eyes of men and women, who toiled fiercely side by side at the work of rescue.

The wreck was that of a westbound express train, on which were many prominent people, and a freight. The express crashed into the freight, and two cars of dynamite, thirty tons in all, exploded.

STOP 'DOCKING' ON NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, May 11.—In order issued from the offices of General Superintendent Higgins, of the New Haven road, today, announcement is made of the intention of the road to institute on June 1 the new system of discipline for employes, known as the Brown system.

The announcement says that the enforcement of discipline of suspension, except as noted, will be discontinued, and discipline by record will be inaugurated. Until further notice this applies only to employes in engine, train, yard and telegraph service. The objects of the system are to avoid loss of wages by persons employed and suffering to those dependent upon their earnings, and to stimulate faithful and intelligent service.

AWARDED $6,270 FROM TELEPHONE COMPANY

Elmer Evans was awarded $6,270 by Superior Court jury which heard his suit before Judge Richardson for $30,000 damages against the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. Two years ago Evans was struck by a falling limb, cut from a tree on Alvord street, Charlestown, by an employe of the corporation.

THINK UNIDENTIFIED MAN WAS MURDERED

MANCHESTER, Vt., May 11.—The authorities are investigating to determine how an unidentified man found under the grist mill dam near the Colburn House came to his death. The coroner found a deep cut on the left temple and bruises about his head and reported that death was due to a blow on the head from some unknown instrument.

DYNAMITE CAUSES FRIGHTFUL HAVOC

Special to the Boston American.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 11—Twenty persons were killed and about 150 injured, many fatally, by an express train on the Pennsylvania road plunging at full speed into a freight, which had stopped because of a minor accident on the outskirts of this city at 1:10 a. m. to-day.

There were two cars loaded with dynamite attached to the freight train. The explosion of the engine of the express caused the dynamite in the two freight cars to explode.

The three explosions completely wrecked both trains, hurling many persons to death without awakening them, and pinning scores of others beneath the burning debris.

Burned With Help Near

Screams of terror and agony from mortal hurts soon roused those who had not been fatally injured, and men and women toiled side by side in the work of rescue. The scenes were fearful. Several persons were burned to death by the greedy flames, as rescue was almost at hand.

Many prominent persons were on the express train. One of these was Mrs. Tindle, a daughter of United States Knox, who was reported badly injured. At first it was stated that the Senator himself was on the train, but this report is not confirmed. One widely known man who was badly injured was Samuel Shubert, the threatrical manager of New York.

Torrent of Flaming Embers From Wrecked Engines Set Cars on Fire and Helpless Passengers, Pinned in Wreckage, Perished Before Eyes of Onlookers.

No. 19, which left New York at 8:44 o'clock last night. It arrived at Philadelphia at 11:05, and was due at Harrisburg at 1:15 this morning. Engineer H. K. Thomas of Philadelphia and Fireman R. R. Dickey were in the cab.

No Flagman Sent Back.

Only a short time before they pulled into Harrisburg a freight train had been derailed near the plant of the Paxtang Light, Heat & Power Company on Cedar street, South Harrisburg. Through some blunder no flagman had been sent to warn approaching trains, and, tearing at lightning speed the passenger train, with its six Pullman sleepers, one passenger coach, a mail coach and two baggage cars, crashed into the freight wreck. This was at 1:10 o'clock.

Instantly there was a terrific explosion, caused by the boiler of the passenger locomotive or one of the gas tanks of the Pullman coaches. The flames touched off some blasting powder in one of the freight cars, and this was immediately followed by the explosion of two cars of dynamite.

Asleep when the collision came, many of the passengers were hurled to death without awakening. The forward cars of the passenger train were tossed by the air like small chips of wood and crashed down upon the already wrecked freight train. Flames quickly spread, and their roar drowned the cries of the injured passengers.

GREAT HOLE TORN IN EARTH.

The track for many feet was torn clear away, and where the dynamite cars had been there was a great hole in the ground. The steel frames and the heavy iron work of the cars were twisted like fruit wire. So great was the force of the explosion that several passengers were hurled into the air and thrown into the Susquehanna River, a hundred feet away.

Windows in houses and factories for a mile around were shattered as by an earthquake. The residents, awakened, ran from their homes, and seeing the flames of the burning wreck hurried to the scene to give aid.

Alarms were sent from all the fire houses, and the entire police force and fire department of Harrisburg answered. When they arrived there was scarcely an unwounded person among the passengers.

ENGINEER KILLED INSTANTLY.

Engineer Thomas had been killed instantly, and Fireman Dickey had narrowly escaped death by being thrown down an embankment.

Many of the passengers had been caught in their berths and burned alive. Their bodies could be seen in the wreckage, and while some of them still showed signs of life it was impossible to save them.

The wreck was soon a fiery furnace, which made it difficult for the rescuers to continue their work. They fought the flames as best they could and dragged the injured and dead into the open.

The bodies were placed in long rows and the physicians went among them selecting those they could save and passing by those whom they knew it was impossible to aid. The hundreds of citizens who came lent their aid and the women ran to their homes and returned with sheets from which to make bandages. They also brought stimulants and did everything in their power to relieve the sufferings of the passengers.

Ghastly in the extreme was the sight, but the rescuers worked on without a thought of the resemblances of ill. Even the injured insisted on helping.

TWO GHOULS CAUGHT.

But as in most wrecks and disasters of the kind there were several who turned ghouls and robbed the dead. Two negroes were caught with stolen satchels, and the bodies had hard work to save them from angry citizens. A Hungarian was arrested as he was taking a ring from the finger of a woman.

From under the wreckage came cries for help, the agonizing screams of the tortured dying and the groans of those pinned in the wreckage. There were cries from the river as it swept by. Men dived into the stream and pulled in half a score of men and women. Some of them were about on pieces of wreckage. Others were able to swim, and some supported others in the down waters.

Precautions had been taken in making the freight train to avoid the danger of explosion. The two cars loaded with dynamite had been so placed that they could be protected by the cars at either end. When the engine boiler exploded, it had plowed its way through the freight wreck until it was almost upon the cars of explosives.

Following the explosion of the boiler, the hissing of steam, the crackling of flames as it took hold of the woodwork of the freight cars and passenger coaches, and cries of those pinned down or hurled to the sides of the track, came the second explosion.

EARTH SEEMED LIFTED UP.

When the first car of dynamite exploded the very earth seemed to rise. Every car on the freight train was lifted into the air, and as they rose the flames curled about them.

The first three coaches of the passenger train seemed flung to the heavens, so high did they go, and as they fell, carrying down with them a score of passengers, many of them unconscious, they, too, were burning.

Some of the passengers in the day coaches were hurled clear of the wreck by the engine boiler explosion, lifted and carried through space.

SECOND EXPLOSION DEADLY.

The first explosion was followed by cries of help from the Pullman coaches. Some of those hurled from their berths had been bruised, others had been cut by dying glass or woodwork.

But the second explosion shot them in all directions, their bodies sinking holes through the sides of the splintered and twisted coaches. The coaches were lifted into the air and, as they fell, they toppled upon their ends and sides.

There were no cries following this second explosion. If there were those among the 105 passengers and the crews of the two trains who were conscious, they were dumb with fright. Many were not conscious and many were dead, blown to fragments.

Many of the rescuers came only half clad, having run from their shaking homes in such fright that there was no time to dress. They joined the cut, bleeding, bruised and shuddering men and women. The injured were cared for, and then the rescuers turned on to the wreck.

Cries sounded from the river; they sounded from the field; they sounded from the wreck, from those pinned down in the debris.

Work of Rescue Unceasing.

Without any rest, the rescuers have worked at the wreck since they were aroused from their sleep by the three terrific explosions.

The physicians of this city have given the men and women clothing, for not a passenger escaped but had only a night robe.

Mrs. Albert J. Barr, wife of the editor and proprietor of the Pittsburg Post, and her two daughters were on the train and are now in the Harrisburg Hotel badly injured. When picked up near the tracks they were without any clothing. They were covered in quilts and taken in a carriage to the hotel.

One of the most heartrending scenes was when the body of Mrs. Robert Dongherty was found. She was accompanied by her husband and little boy, aged ten years. They hunted for a long time in the dark with terrible foreboding, until they were horrified to find that their loved mother and wife was dead.

The father was prostrated with grief, and the boy, too, felt to the extreme the sting of sudden and horrible bereavement that came upon them so suddenly. The boy in sobs cried:

"Father, don't cry. Father, we ought to be thankful to the Lord that we got here safely while all those other people were burned to a crisp."

The scene was witnessed by a half dozen stout-hearted railroad men who have seen many a wreck, but every one was moved to tears.

The Dongherty home is at No. 1,205 South Twenty-eighth street, Philadelphia. The body will be taken to Philadelphia to-night.

PARENTS FALL IN SWOON.

Albert Zirott and his wife Mary, from New York, were also passengers on the [illegible] that may be a possible aid in identifying the bodies.

The force of the dynamite explosion caused an explosion of gasoline in the [illegible] at a grocery store near the scene. [illegible] set fire to six dwellings, completely destroying them.

At 7 o'clock to-day only ashes and tinted, blackened iron remained of the two Pullmans burned in the explosion, and the passengers. Two skulls and a few [illegible] scattered bones were discovered among the smoking debris. No one knows yet how many of the passengers of the cars escaped. Both were crowded, and not even the porters who were supposed to awake have been located.

The railroad officials, despairing of [illegible] any clue to the passengers who were burned with the cars, have ordered the wreckage thrown into the Susquehanna. The dust of a score may be mingled with the cinders of the two sleeping cars. No one knows.

The hospital authorities have abandoned all attempts to ascertain the names of the seriously injured of those who fill the wards and corridors. There are 125 there. The police report over a dozen peoples in other places who are too badly hurt to tell their names.

The telegraph offices have received many messages from men to their families to say they are alive.

Thus far the only identified dead are

SOMERVILLE ROUSED OVER GARBAGE PLANT

Citizens Will Make Protest Emphatic at Public Hearing To-night.

It is expected that at least 800 citizens of the Magoun square and Winter Hill districts will attend the hearing before the Somerville Board of Aldermen to-night at the City Hall, to protest against the present location of the city garbage plant on the city grounds at Broadway and Cedar streets. A rousing indignation meeting of 300 citizens was held in the Bingham school last night, at which prepa[illegible] were made for the presentation of their case to-night, when Lawyer E. J. Fitzgerald will appear in their behalf.

The alarm among the residents is greater than ever owing to the fact that a school girl who resides on Lawrence street, adjoining the garbage plant, has been stricken with cerebro spinal meningitis and two other cases in the immediate vicinity have been reported the past week. The citizens declare that the odors from the garbage plant are responsible for such sickness.

Up to Board of Aldermen.

The opponents to the plant held a most enthusiastic meeting last night, at which John F. Burke of No. 280 Lowell street presided. Citizens united in a declaration for the abolition of the garbage plant. The committee having charge of collecting funds to defray expenses reported through Chairman Frank Hayden that a goodly sum had been subscribed and that considerably more was promised.

JEROME WAITS TO TRY CHORUS GIRL AGIN

May Order Another Trial for Nan Patterson if He Can Use Letters Taken From Smiths.

NEW YORK, May 11.—District Attorney Jerome probably will decide today or to-morrow whether he will put Nan Patterson on trial again for the alleged murder of "Caesar" Young, or allow he to be released on a nominal bail.

The District Attorney, it is said wants to try her again, but it is understood that he will not do so unless he can utilize some evidence in his possession that was not introduced at the recent trial.

This evidence consists of some letters that were written by Nan Patterson and were obtained by the detectives from the J. Morgan Smiths when they were taken into custody in Cincinnati. It was the intention to use these letters in rebuttal at the trial, but when Lawyer Levy found out about them, it is said, he decided not to put the "Floradora" girl on the stand, thus checkmating the intended move of Mr. Rand.

Mr. Jerome is now looking up the law with regard to these letters, and if he finds that he can use the letters in another trial, it is believed that he may try the young women again, in that event the trial would not be held until next Fall and Nan Patterson would have to stay in the Tombs.

PORTLAND, Me., May 11.—A badly decomposed body, found floating in the harbor, has been identified as that of Everett Ward, son of Everett Ward Foster, of No. 397 Salem street, Medford, Mass.

FREED BY EXPLOSION, COPE ESCAPED DEATH

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 11.—Arthur G. Cope of Pittsburg escaped from the great wreck with a few injuries. He said to-day:

"I was asleep in the smoking compartment when the shock came, and was caught between two seats and held fast until the second explosion occurred, which threw me. I crawled toward the door. Both doors were jammed, and amid wreck and flames I tried the windows. One was open, and, with two or three others, I managed to get out. There were no cries in our car. The inmates were either killed outright as they slept or were thrown through the windows."

Mrs. Robert K. Dongherty, No. 1205 South Twenty-eighth street, Philadelphia, and H. K. Thomas, engineer of the ill-fated express. One one body, charred beyond all hope of recognition, there has just been found a Masonic emblem inscribed "Jacob F. Silverman, Bridgeton, N. J., Dec. 21, 1903."

MANAGER REYNOLDS HELPS SAVE WOMAN

HARRISBURG, May 11.—"The first intimation I had of the wreck," said John B. Reynolds of Pittsburg, manager of Miss Blanche Walsh, who was going home from New York for the Summer and escaped with slight injuries, "was when I heard an awful crash and was thrown out into the aisle of the car. I was dazed for some little time and only realized my position and what had happened when I felt a woman grabbing me, screaming 'For God's sake, help me.'

"I helped push her out of the window and a fellow-passenger handed a child out which belonged to her.

"This passenger then left the train and called to me to jump through the window. Just then there was a terrific explosion. As I dropped to the ground a missile struck and knocked me down. I don't know how long I lay there, but when I recovered my senses I crawled across the two tracks on all fours under a freight train and rolled down the embankment on the other side. I was in my night clothes and all my other clothing and belongings were lost.

"The whole scene was most terrible. Women were screaming, children were crying and men were wandering about dazed and helpless. The tracks were strewn in all directions with half-clothed men and women, some of whom were dead and others seriously injured."

HARRISBURG WRECK RECALLS MELROSE DYNAMITE DISASTER

The disaster at South Harrisburg recalls the dynamite explosion at Melrose on Sept. 21 last, which resulted in the death of nine people and the wounding of seventeen more. The accident occurred on Wyoming avenue. A fifty-pound box of dynamite dropped from a wagon and was run over by a car crowded with passengers. A terrific explosion occurred. The motorman of the car was instantly killed, his body being hurled through the air a distance of 100 feet.

An investigation was made to find who was responsible for the accident and some arrests were made, but the prisoners were released. Damage suits have been brought against both the city of Melrose and the Boston & Northern Railroad Company.

FEVER CAUSES CANAL EMPLOYES TO QUIT

NEW YORK, May 11.—The steamer Seguranca, from Colon, which arrived here to-day, brought almost thirty employes of the Isthmian Commission who had resigned. They are said to have quit the work at Colon because of the increasing fever there.

IS MEDFORD MAN'S BODY.

PORTLAND, Me., May 11.—A badly decomposed body, found floating in the harbor, has been identified as that of Everett Ward, son of Everett Ward Foster, of No. 397 Salem street, Medford, Mass.

George Hatch, ex-Alderman, reported that he had conferred with various members of the Board of Health, but the members were of the opinion that the Board of Aldermen had the power to remove the plant. Mr. Hatch declared that in his opinion the Board of Health, under the city ordinances, was compelled to protect the health of the city and that as the garbage plant was a menace to the health it was their duty to remove it to some remote spot.

Chairman Burke announced the aldermen who were responsible for placing the plant in the midst of the thickly populated district and cited two cases of "spotted fever," which have developed the past week, one at No. 61 Lawrence avenue, within fifty yards of the garbage plant, the other at No. 33 Trull street, within 500 yards of the plant.

"If the list keeps on increasing in this section," he said, "what is going to become of our children? Is it fair or just to the residents of this section, where more children reside than in any other section of the city, to place such a pest and disease breeder among us? It is a direct insult by the city authorities who are responsible, and I believe we should hold them to account. If the Board of Aldermen decline to act on relief, we will have to seek higher aid."

Injures Real Estate.

Mr. Manogiell of the Highland Park district stated that within the past five years 565 houses have been erected in that section, ranging in value from $3,000 to $5,000 each. Owners and occupants alike have signified their intentions of leaving the section unless the plant is removed.

Walter Langer, a city official, favored presenting a petition to the Board of Health, containing the names of the 3,000 objectors and believed it would result in the Board of Health removing the nuisance.

George E. McNeil, the veteran labor leader, who has recently purchased a house in the Highland Park district, was enthusiastically greeted when he spoke. He said: "I am willing to aid the movement in every way, and will appear as a witness before the board of health, if necessary."

Lawyer Flynn explained to the citizens the necessity of turning out in large numbers at the hearing, and of giving testimony against the plant.

The inmates of the house of John T. Matkin at No. 57 Lawrence street are compelled to keep their windows, overlooking the garbage plant, closed owing to the odors from it, Mr. Matigan declared.

TOWN RAZED; HUNDREDS ARE DEAD BY TORNADO

Snyder, Oklahoma, Wiped Out by Terrific Cyclone and Nearly Half of the People Said to Have Been Killed in Disaster. Wires Down and Details Are Meagre.

Until one of the trains returns the extent of the havoc wrought can only be conjectured. It is believed, however, that the killed will approximate 500. There were 1,200 inhabitants in the town, and it is not thought that many of them escaped either death or injury.

The first news of the disaster reached Hobart about midnight. A relief train was hurriedly made up and all of the doctors and volunteer nurses who could be found were rushed to the scene. About the same time it is reported that Quanah, Texas, heard of the storm's awful work and also made up a relief train.

A train was also made up by the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway in this city and Chickasaw shortly before 6 o'clock to-day, and both have gone to Snyder. On both trains are all the physician and nurses obtainable in the two places. It is said that practically every house in the town has been wrecked.

Shortly after 2 o'clock this morning communication between Chickasaw and Hobart was secured, and Hobart confirmed the earlier reports that were received here. The telegraph operator for the Western Union in Hobart says that more than 100 are dead.

A heavy wind has been blowing in the western part of Oklahoma all day, and in many places hail and rain has fallen. It is said that a heavy hailstorm accompanied the tornado. Several minor storms have been reported and in some places the damage has been severe.

The St. Louis and San Francisco railroad officials received word of the tornado through the train dispatcher at Enid, Okla. Shortly after that the wires refused to work and nothing but the bald report could be obtained.

It is believed that the first relief train to return will be the one that was sent from Chickasaw, but it is hardly expected before late to-night or to-morrow morning.

It is reported that among the dead is J. M. Egan, the station agent at Snyder. The railroad station, it is said, was reduced to kindling wood.

The greatest excitement prevails here because of the nature of the reports. That there has been a disaster that is unprecedented in this section of the country everybody believes and the fear that this city may be the next victim of the storm's wrath is felt by many.

Some of the residents of Oklahoma City have relatives in Snyder and are very anxious for the earliest news. The telegraph offices here are crowded by men and women who ask for the latest news from the destroyed town. There is no actual news to give them as yet as wire communication is still impossible.

The latest report is to the effect that all of the houses in the town were destroyed except two and that the dead will reach 250 and the wounded 500.

SAM SHUBERT TELLS OF AWFUL WRECK

BY SAMUEL SHUBERT.

(By Long Distance Telephone.)

I am pretty badly hurt myself. My legs are burned and I have suffered great pain. How I escaped from that wreck and those series of explosions I will never know. I only know that Abe Thalheimer saved my life and that he carried me across burning cars into the woods, while explosion after explosion occurred.

With Mr. Thalheimer and William Klein, my lawyer, and "Jack" Reynolds, manager for Blanche Walsh, we were going to Pittsburg. The first I knew of the accident was when there came a sudden stop, as our engine crashed into the overturned wreck of the freight train. Then there came an explosion that shook the very earth. The glass from the coach was heaped about our heads. I seemed to be pinned to my berth in some way. I tried to get out, but I must have been partially stunned. I heard cries all about me. The lamp crashed down and instantly the coach seemed to be blazing from end to end.

Car Hurled Through Space by Explosion.

Then came a second explosion. It was twice as bad as the first. My coach was literally lifted into the air and carried through space. The second explosion seemed to bring me to my senses. Then, too, I could feel the flame curling up to the side of my berth, and it was eating into my legs. I heard Thalheimer calling for me. I heard him yelling "Sam" many times, and I managed to answer him. He came to my berth and unfastened the woodwork that held me fast. I could not walk; he had to carry me on his shoulders.

Thalheimer, at the first explosion, had broken the window of his berth with his hand, cutting it badly. It was bleeding. He had got the hammock from his berth and tied it to the side of the coach, and he carried me to the window and I scrambled down. Then he came after me. On the adjoining track, and on the side of the car out of which we climbed, the freight train was turned over and burning. Every car in the freight was on fire and every car in the express was blazing.

After the first explosions I could hear screams of men and women. After the second explosion these cries seemed to cease.

Thalheimer lowered himself down the hammock after I had reached the ground and walked over the blazing cars in his bare feet to help me to his back. He wore no shoes, and the flames caught our pajamas and burned them off of us.

Mr. Thalheimer carried me to some woods near by and then went back for Reynolds and Klein. Poor Klein, he is among the missing, and no doubt is dead.

Thalheimer met Reynolds coming from the burning coach. He had suffered much the same experience that I had. The second explosion seemed to have released him from the woodwork that held him to his berth.

As Thalheimer came up to Reynolds there came a third explosion. No one in these coaches could have escaped death this time. I can't describe the carnage it worked. It seemed twice as bad as the second explosion. I saw those burning cars and coaches thrown into the air. They reminded me of burning skyrockets.

I was lying flat on my back when the third explosion occurred. I knew that I had been burnt, but the excitement was such that I had not begun to feel pain. I was only weak and unable to stand. I was lifted from where I lay and tossed some feet away, and I thought the drums of my ears would burst.

Tried in Vain to Save Companion.

Reynolds and Thalheimer were some distance from the wreck and some distance from me, but both of them were taken from their feet and dashed against the ground. There they lay like dead for a minute or more, and then they rose and came to me and sank down on the ground by my side.

Later Talheimer tried to get back to the burning wreck to save Klein. By this time the coaches were burning furiously. There were a dozen or more small explosions and they seemed to make the flames mount higher as they came. I called to Talheimer to come back, but he climbed into the burning coach, and when he came out he was black and the remnants of his pajamas not burned off were scorched.

There came no cries of help after the third explosion for fully five minutes. I could hear the people in the town yelling and they seemed to be running. Then there came a cry of men, women and children that seemed to come from one person. It was like one great wail as it sounded through the night. I could hear these cries coming from the river, and I knew then that there were men and women in the water. They had been tossed there by the explosion.

I saw the rescuers run in after these and bring them to the banks. I also saw men and women, many of them with no clothes on, they having torn off their garments in escaping from the wreck or had them burned off by the fire, running about like mad, looking for friends or relatives.

It was a sight that one will never forget. I can't describe half of it. They tried to rescue those pinned in the wreck, but this was impossible. The dead were then brought out and placed in line. It was a long row of crushed, burned and torn bodies.

Then came the injured line. It was as long as the line of dead. The cries of those injured were too horrible for me to think about.

The rescuers came for us late and took us here to the Commonwealth Hotel. I don't know how long I will have to stay here.

I have been asked to tell how many have been killed and injured. I know that there were 160 persons on that train and that not one escaped unhurt.

I know also that the list of twenty dead will not cover the list.

ELDER SAYS DALY RAIDED EQUITABLE

Brookline Man's Policy Used as Security for $54,000 Loan.

TWO ARRESTS EXPECTED

NEW YORK, May 11.—Owing to a technical defect with reference to the order served upon officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society by the attorney for Herbert G. Tull, a Philadelphia stockholder in the company, the examination of James H. Hyde, J. W. Alexander and George E. Tarbell, in reference to the passing of the so-called amended charter of the Equitable Society, was adjourned to-day by Supreme Court Justice Bischoff until next Monday.

The order directs the three officers of the Equitable to appear before Justice Bischoff at the time named with all the minutes, books and papers which refer to the meeting of the directors of the Equitable Society, held on March 21.

Investigation of the management of the loan department of the Equitable leads Assistant District Attorney Elder of Brooklyn to say that the society lost $54,000 in two raids made upon it by William Daly, alias Samuel Lobley. He is indicted on the charge of taking $27,000.

It is said the alleged conspirators found no difficulty in borrowing the money upon the ten-year endowment policy issued to William B. Cotton of Brookline, Mass., who is president of the American Tube Company of Boston. Brooklyn banks cashed the checks, but President Sullivan of the Nassau Trust Company says his institution did not cash the Lobley application until the Equitable Society had certified it.

The arrest of two confidential and trusted employes of the Equitable is expected. They are suspected of complicity in the fraud perpetrated through use of Mr. Cotton's stolen policy. Police are watching them.

BLAZING OIL TANK MENACES ENTIRE TOWN

People of Downs, W. Va., Building Earthworks to Protect Their Property.

LOSS ALREADY $1,000,000

WHEELING, W. Va., May 11.—The people of Downs are working frantically, building embankments of earth about a 12,000-gallon oil tank of the Standard Oil Company, which is on fire, and from which a number of houses in the vicinity have caught already.

The loss to the Standard company is $1,000,000 so far, and there are other tanks, with a combined capacity of 80,000 barrels, close to the burning one.

A cannon was sent from Morgantown for the purpose of sending a ball through the heavy iron tank in the expectation that if the tank were punctured the flames would die out, but the intense heat made it impossible to take the cannon near enough to send a shot through the iron.

The fire is said to have been caused by the carelessness of an employe, who dropped a lighted match while gauging the tank.

SEES ANOTHER WAR BY BOERS

Barnet Myers, a member of a stock brokerage firm of Johannesburg, Cape Town and London, is in Boston, and declares that there will probably be an uprising of the Boers in South Africa before another year that may bring on another war.

"I should not be surprised," said Mr. Myers, "if there was another Boer outbreak, perhaps resulting in another Boer war, within a year. If it should come, it would not last so long or be on so large a scale as the last war between Transvaal and Great Britain, for the Boers are still in a weakened condition as a result of that war. Their arms were taken away from them when the war was ended, they are poorer now than then, and there are less of them. But their spirit is not broken yet. They are still Boers, and still are anxious to have their Transvaal republic and manage their own affairs.

BERESFORD SAYS HORROR OF COMING NAVAL BATTLE WILL STOP ALL WARS FOR YEARS

"The Russian and Japanese fleets will meet in a few days. Japan will win. The slaughter of men in that battle will be so great as to startle the civilized world. The only redeeming feature of the fight will be the fact that there will be no more wars for years. The horrors will be great.

"Japan will win the fight by getting the superior position and firing the greater number of telling shots, even though Russia has the greater number of ships.

"England and America hold the secret of peace. If these two countries should mass their fleets no other country or group of countries would dare to fight them."—Lord Charles Beresford, Vice-Admiral of the British Navy.

FIND CHILD'S COAT 15 MILES FROM BRALEY'S

Mother Denies That It Was Worn by Missing Boy—Sheriff Suspicious.

Special to the Boston American.

DANBURY, N. H., May 11.—Deputy Sheriff Claude Murray has received a child's blouse which was found on the road a mile and a half beyond Hanover and which it was believed belonged to missing Elwin Braley. This blouse he showed to Mrs. Braley, the child's mother.

The blouse, however, to the mind of Deputy Murray, means something. He believes that if Elwin Braley was kidnapped other clothing may have been provided for him. In changing the child's clothing the blouse may have dropped from the team and those with the child have been in too much of a hurry to stop for it.

Think It Dropped from Buggy.

The blouse was found by Mrs. Smith, of West Springfield, who was returning home by the same road on which County Commissioner Hoyt, of Enfield, saw the man, woman and child in a buggy on the day the boy disappeared. It is believed that it was dropped from that buggy.

Deputy Sheriff Murray heard of the find, and drove over to see Mrs. Smith, who gave him the blouse. Fully convinced that it belonged to the missing boy, the energetic officer drove fifteen miles to show it to Mrs. Braley.

Her declaration that her child did not wear the blouse was disappointing, but the garment will be kept.

Officials Are Encouraged.

County Solicitor Cobleigh has more hope to-day that there will be a solution of the mystery than at any time during the two weeks that Elwin Braley has been missing.

"I will endeavor to reach Danbury myself to-day," he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "I want to make a personal inquiry into new facts which we have in possession.

"Have any new facts been brought out which will help in getting at the bottom of this affair?" Mr. Cobleigh was asked.

"Yes, there are some new facts. What they are I cannot tell at the present time. We are following the information closely. It may show something, but we cannot tell until we have looked into it.

No Evidence of Kidnapping.

"The investigation is not yet over. Aside from my official interest I personally would like to have this mystery cleared up. Never before have I run up against an affair just like this—where there is so little to the way of helpful information, where the officers have been baffled at every turn, where there are so few clues.

"Everything that could be done by the officers has been done. All theories have been considered. There isn't the slightest evidence to prove the child was kidnapped; neither is there the slightest thing to show that there has been foul play.

"The child has disappeared as though swallowed up by the earth. It is our duty to find him if possible. To that end our efforts have been directed, so far without success; but the case is not given up yet."

May Resume Search.

There is talk of organizing another searching party and having every bit of territory where the child could be found gone over thoroughly. Many searchers have gone over the territory near the Braley homestead, but it is urged that another effort should be made systematically. There is little doubt in the minds of those who wandered off alone into the woods and there died.

At the Braley home no hope appears to be entertained that the missing child will be returned to its home in health or that it is near future.

Grandmother Braley alone watches the visitors with an anxious expression, as though the longed-for child would bring cheer and news. Apparently Grandmother Braley, at least, has hopes that Elwin will be found alive.

SUED LAWSON, THEN PAID HIM

"Yes, I have won another notable victory with my enemies, and this time the cold cash comes flowing in like so much water," declared Thomas W. Lawson as he talked over the outcome of the suit of Paul Fuller and Frederick Coudert against him for the recovery of $100,000.

"They wanted that unreasonable amount," he continued, "and we turned the tables to such an extent that the gentlemen, through their attorney, finally adjusted the matter by giving me an even $11,000 in cash.

WOMAN HIT MAIL CARRIER

SALEM, May 11.—Mrs. Joseph F. Bellefleur, one of the best known society women in Salem, will appear in court Saturday to answer a charge of interfering with the United States mail and assault upon Letter Carrier Charles W. Mrs. Bellefleur some time ago attracted considerable attention by hitting a traveling salesman with an umbrella. She claimed the man was trying to flirt with her, which he indignantly denied.

WOMAN'S COUP TIES UP MILLIONS IN GREAT BROKERAGE BUSINESS

Financial Circles Marvel at Receivership Tangle of Haight & Freese.

$50,000 in New Claims Now in Hands of Counsel—Creditors Are Anxious.

Financial circles in Boston and New England, in fact wherever the house of Haight & Freese has been conducting business, are still wondering at the feat of a single woman in tieing up completely the million dollar business of the big brokerage firm.

Thousands and thousands of former customers are in a state of bewilderment bordering almost on consternation and are telegraphing the offices of the company wherever they are located in an effort to learn the fate of their securities.

The receivership which was first made in Boston has been followed by similar action in Chicago, Cleveland and Philadelphia. In New York a voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed by the company.

Woman Wants Justice.

Mrs. A. B. L. Weiss the Needham woman whose petition closed operations of the house, says of the matter:

"There is only one reason in the world why I am taking this action, thereby ruining all this notoriety, and that is for the sake of justice to myself and children. Perhaps it will be of some benefit to others who have lost money in the same way that my husband did."

Contrary to expectations, Haight & Freese have made no effort thus far to have the receivership vacated. That they have not abandoned the idea is shown by statement of their counsel, who says: "We will ask for the vacation of the receivership just as soon as we get the necessary papers prepared, and we will have them ready in a few days." Counsel for Mrs. Weiss's counsel characterized the court's action as an unusual proceeding.

The business of this woman, said E. H. Clark, the attorney representing the firm, "has increased with our firm from $182,000 to the time of his death, and never during all that time did we make any complaint of our treatment of him.

Appeared Satisfied.

"When he died his widow was appointed administratrix of his estate, and she came to our office to see how the account of her husband stood. She was shown the books and did not appear to be in the least dissatisfied, and asked that the money that was due her be paid.

"Mrs. Weiss was asked to sign a release before she was paid the money, and this was witnessed by a man named Schmidt. Upon this release rests our whole case. If the courts can appoint a receiver in the face of such action I do not see what a receipt or release amounts to."

Two interesting petitions have been filed in the United States Court to-day. They were both by Moore & Lyndell and Hugh E. Hobbs, of Boston, who claim to have dropped $1,052 and $2,019 during the Mrs. Weiss and Haight & Freese failures. The petitions and receive the full benefits of the suit commenced by Mrs. Weiss.

$50,000 in Claims.

Claims amounting to $50,000 from former customers who allege fraud are now in the hands of the counsel for the receiver. They are divided up among fifty or more former customers of the firm, and vary in amounts from $50 to $15,000. They come from people in every walk of life, from a widely scattered territory, and not a few of them are from women, whose husbands or relatives are alleged to have lost money through the operations of the company.

No estimate of the Boston assets of the company has been made, but it is reported that assets amounting to $200,000 were located in the New York office. All offices of the firm have been closed.

MARSHMALLOWS AND CEMENT HIDE WHISKY

PORTLAND, Me., May 11.—The ingenuity of liquor smugglers was shown when Deputy Sheriff Clifford captured five barrels of cement, in which were imbedded ten five-gallon jugs of whiskey, sent here from Boston. Another deputy confiscated a box consigned to a confectionery firm. Under two layers of marshmallows he found forty pint bottles of [illegible].

AMUNDSEN FINDS MAGNETIC NORTH POLE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—The expedition under Captain Roald Amundsen, which sailed from Christiania, Norway, June 17, 1903, in a little forty-six ton sloop, has found the magnetic North Pole, whose discovery is officially credited to Ross in 1831, although many scientists doubt that Ross really located this elusive guide to the compasses to the world.

The North Magnetic Pole has been generally assumed by geographers as being on Boothia, the most northerly peninsula of the American continent and close to King William's Land. It is supposed to be a shifting sphere of influence, though its variations are not great.

It is not to be confused with the terrestrial North Pole, the point of axis, which is situated some 1,200 miles to the true north of the magnetic pole.

Amundsen passed in his little ship a petroleum engines, which, under favorable conditions, would propel the ship four knots an hour, but his main reliance was upon the sailing ability and seaworthiness of his craft.

Expedition Cost $27,500.

The estimated cost of the expedition, which is to last four years, was only $27,500, the greater portion of which Captain Amundsen defrayed from his own pocket.

Captain Amundsen, who was first officer of the Belgium South Polar expedition's ship, the Belgica, conceived during the long winter nights of 1897-8, when his vessel was fast in the ice, the desire to explore the district surrounding the North Magnetic Pole. To quote his own words:

"Every one, as you are aware, magnetic forces in the earth which cause the compass to assume a certain position at each place on the earth's surface. The north end of the needle points northward, but not exactly in the direction of the geographical pole. At some places it points east of the true north, at others west.

Situated at Boothia.

"If we are to imagine expeditions starting from various places on the surface of the earth, and each moving forward always in the direction indicated by the north end of the compass needle, these expeditions at last would meet at a point situated in Boothia, the most northerly peninsula of the American continent. This point is called the magnetic pole of the earth.

"If, on the contrary, these expeditions had taken the direction indicated by the south ends of the needle, they would have met finally at a point on the Antarctic continent, Victoria Land, near the South pole. This point is called the magnetic south pole. These two magnetic poles also are remarkable from the fact that a so called magnetic dipping needle will at these places assume a vertical position, with the north end downward and the magnetic North pole and with the south end downward at the magnetic South pole.

"But the relocation of the magnetic pole was not all that I had set myself to do. Amundsen has laid out for himself. Another of his purposes was to discover, if possible, the Northwest passage.

PROVINCETOWN, May 11.—Captain Evans of the tug Confidence has arrived here from Pollock Rip, after investigating the condition of the Joy Line steamer Aransas, which lies in nine fathoms of water. He reports that while a small portion of the cargo may be raised, the vessel is a total wreck.

URGES JAPAN TO ASK BRITISH HELP IN WAR

Tokio Press Bitterly Scores France for "Duplicity" in Aiding Russia.

TOKIO, May 11.—The Nichi Nichi, discussing French neutrality, to-day will say that Japan has a right to demand of Great Britain that she carry into practice the provisions of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. "French duplicity," the Nichi Nichi will say, "affords the occasion."

Continuing, the Nichi Nichi will declare that the assistance given Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky is a clear breach of neutrality and a violation of a definite pledge given to Japan.

The Nichi Nichi will say further: "Japan is justified in assuming that France is deliberately assisting Russia."

In conclusion the Nichi Nichi will say: "Let France either publicly range herself on the side of Russia or manfully adhere to the principle of strict neutrality."

PARIS, May 11.—In the course of an apparently authoritative statement published here of Japan's case against France a summary is given of various acts of assistance rendered the vessels of the Russian second Pacific squadron at Cherbourg, Dakar, Algiers, Jibutil, Mogunga, Diego Suarez, Kamranh Bay, Port Dayot and Hon Kohe Bay. The conclusions of the Japanese Government are stated to be as follows:

"First—Without questioning the good faith of France, Japan holds that the French orders to observe neutrality have not been sufficiently executed.

"Second—France should have taken sufficient measures beforehand to prevent violations of neutrality, instead of securing the observance of neutrality after Japan's remonstrances.

"Third—In default of sufficient surveillance Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky has been greatly facilitated in the accomplishment of his mission and in gaining access to Chinese waters."

WIFE NO. 2 AT SUICIDE'S GRAVE

Mrs. Nellie T. Wright Reardon, the second wife of Robert Francis Wright, a Needham horse and cattle dealer, who committed suicide, attended the quiet funeral services held in Concord to-day. Mrs. Lena Baker Wright, the third wife, was not present. Her father says that no attorney will be employed to learn if the widow is facing poverty and will protect her interests in that event. Wright's first wife is dead, and he married Lena Baker without getting a divorce from his second. It is said that discovery of that fact irked by the women led him to end his life in a Howard street lodging house.

WOMAN FOILS FIREBUG'S WORK

MRS WEISS

That Mrs. William Mackintosh, who alarmed the lodgers in the house at No. 122 Chandler street early today when a fire was burning in the hallway, and then fought the fire herself until aid came, is a heroine, is the opinion of Edwin H. Trussell, the proprietor of the house.

"I was awakened by Mrs. Mackintosh pounding on my door and shouting 'Fire,'" said Mr. Trussell to-day to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "When I rushed into the front hallway I found that a fire had been started by some one at the bottom of the stairs. It was blazing up high, and Mrs. Mackintosh, in her night clothes, was smothering out the flames with a rug. I think she is a heroine for had the fire been allowed to burn the stairs, there would have been no escape for the lodgers."

The fire was plainly an incendiary one. A table cover had been taken from a table in the hallway, and with some papers used to start the fire. A former lodger who is known to have carried off a night key to the house is among the suspects believed to be to blame for setting the fire. The police have been asked to hunt for him.

A second attempt was made on the chandler street home at 4 o'clock, one half hour after the fire was set in the lower hall. A wooden ledger saw a man enter the front door, but when he saw her looking at him, ran from the house and down Chandler street.

Another fire was at No. 321 Columbus avenue. A kerosene soaked bunch of rags was found against the front door and by a lodger, E. F. Collins. Mr. Collins extinguished the flames, and the police were notified. Sergeant Manning and Officer Kerburn, of East Dedham Street Station, visited the house at No. 122 Chandler street to-day.

PRETTY DRACUT WIFE MISSING; FEAR SUICIDE

RIVER TO BE DRAGGED

Petite, handsome, of the pure brunette type, and apparently with everything to live for, Mrs. George Puffer, of Dracut, who, before her marriage, was Miss Jennie Silvie, has disappeared from her home under such conditions that her husband and the Lowell police believe she has committed suicide.

In a note found by Mr. Puffer the young wife declares she has become a burden to him and has gone where nobody will find her, and that a search will avail nothing.

Mrs. Puffer is twenty-one years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Silvie, of North Andover, and before her marriage was the belle of the vicinity.

Mr. Puffer, when he reached home and found the note his wife had left, immediately communicated with her parents who said their daughter had not been there.

"I think that she has done herself harm," said the husband to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "She has not been in the best of health and with her mind not just right after her illness of last night have cut herself into the river."

Mr. Puffer is the son of J. Frank Puffer, a retired furniture manufacturer. He did not know anything amiss until he found the letter, reading: "I am going away. I have been a burden to you and am going where nobody will find me. Please do not try to search for me, Good-by."

Today the canals and Beaver brook will be drawn off, and every effort will be made to find the body.

He searched the barns and the house, but not a sign of her could I find," said Mr. Puffer. "I cannot help thinking that she has done away with herself, and the agony of it almost kills me. Won't the BOSTON AMERICAN try to find her for me. If she has gone away while her mind was distorted by the illness she may see the paper and come back to me."

20 JEWS WERE MURDERED IN JITOMIR ALONE

Fear That Death List Will be Increased When Outlying Districts Are Heard From.

FOUR CHRISTIANS SLAIN

ST. PETERSBURG, May 11.—The tally of dead shows that twenty Jews lost their lives in the riots last Saturday and Sunday in Jitomir, while four Christians were killed in the valiant defence that, for the first time in the history of Jewish persecution in Russia, became a barrier of anti-Semitic riots. More than 200 wounded have been reported. The feeling against the Jews still continues as bitter as ever.

To-day many funerals are being held in Jitomir, and in each Jewish house squads of Cossacks guard the dead and the mourners. The funerals of the Christians killed in the riots are to be held to-morrow, and another outbreak is feared when the burial procession moves along the streets.

Whole City in Riot.

To-day for the first time doors were unbarred, barricades were destroyed and the stores resumed business. On Saturday all business had been suspended and the town was completely given over to riot. Nothing has been learned from the rural districts, where it is known the killing was greater than in Jitomir, and it is feared that in the small villages whole Jewish communities have been wiped out. In Jitomir the town Jews defended themselves heroically, firing from their windows at the attacking parties and pushing their houses, wounding many Christians and killing four.

Martial law has been proclaimed at Jitomir. The place is filled with troops, and general order has been restored, though individual cases of violence are still occurring, and a renewal of rioting is feared Saturday evening and Sunday.

Private advices bring news of a further anti-Semitic outbreak in Grodno, Warsaw Province, in which many Jews were wounded and numerous houses were pillaged.

Jews here fear more rioting, not only in Jitomir and Kremlin, but elsewhere along the Polish frontier.

How the Trouble Started.

The Jitomir troubles were started by roughs stoning some Jews as they were leaving. The Jews defended themselves with revolvers, wounding several of the attacking party, but not seriously.

Reports of this aroused the Christian populace to frenzy. The Jews banded together for mutual protection, and though a general carnival was proclaimed and troops, several ruinous riots occurred, in one of which a Jewish boy was killed and several persons were wounded.

The disorder culminated Sunday in a pitched battle in the public square in the centre of the town and the adjacent streets of the suburbs. The principal bloodshed occurred this day, and the fighting was more organized.

Finally three regiments of Cossacks dispersed the mobs. Numerous arrests were made, including forty Christians.

There was no renewal of fighting on Monday. Instead, the rabble, dividing into small parties, plundered stores and houses where they could evade the military, and committed several murders.

Tuesday and Wednesday looting and outrages continued.

The regular garrison of three infantry regiments has been reinforced by a battery of artillery and a detachment of dragoons.

Cossacks Turn Robbers.

Two Jews were attacked and robbed in the outskirts of Lodz by a band of men, among whom they evidently were Cossacks, one of the victims managing to tear off a portion of a Cossack uniform.

Cossack brutality is provoking intense anger all over the Empire. The Town Council of Nezhin, to-day protested against Cossack cruelty. The Cossacks in garrison there, The Town Council says, are exhausting other means for its dispersal, or giving the prescribed three preliminary signals, by which the crowd dispersed after the volley the troops brutally inspired those remaining in the streets, as well as those who sought refuge in houses, building up terror and heating women and children, as well as men.

The memorialists asserted that a fifteen-year-old girl, hiding in a shed, was subred by a pn policeman, and that a sixteen-year-old boy, who ran into a bakeshop and crawled under the bed for shelter, was dragged therefrom and shot through the head and mortally wounded.

The Minister General regretted the occurrence, but declared that the mob was amply warned. He added that there would be a public investigation, regarding cruelty by individual officers, which he would be ready and willing to investigate.

DENY M'COY'S WIFE DIVORCE

PROVIDENCE, May 11.—The bill in equity brought by Intinia Arnold Selby, a comic opera singer, to secure an annulment of her marriage to Norman Selby, known in sporting circles as "Kid McCoy," has been dismissed by the Supreme Court for want of jurisdiction.

Mrs. Selby claims that her marriage to the prize fighter was a fraud and a farce and asked the court to annul it on the ground that it was performed by a person who was not an authorized clergyman, and that she did not, in fact, intend to marry, she had been married legally, had her intention been known. The ceremony was performed properly and by a proper person.

MRS. DALTON'S STORIES OF CRUELTY WIN DIVORCE

Sketched in Court by Boston American Staff Artist.

MRS. BONNIE BELLE BEARD-DALTON AND HER SISTER.

Married But a Year, Brookline Beauty Tells of Abuse from Husband.

Wedded a little more than a year after a short but romantic courtship, Mrs. Bonnie Belle Beard-Dalton has been freed from the legal fetters that bound her to Robert Dalton. After listening to her amazing story of their short but exceedingly stormy married life, Judge Crosby granted the young society woman a divorce and the privilege of resuming her maiden name.

Bonnie Belle Dalton was the beauteous belle of Brookline. She is a pronounced brunette. Her father was on the staff of Governor Robert E. Lee during the Civil War. When young Dalton met her it was a case of love at first sight. The marriage was a society function. But a month had not passed, according to the testimony

"My Husband Choked Me Before We Were Married a Month."

Choked During Honeymoon.

The judge and spectators listened with incredulous looks upon their faces to the story of domestic infelicity that the plaintiff, who is only twenty years old now, told how her husband choked her before their honeymoon had passed. At first, she said, he choked her with his $25 and 50 cents a week. This lasted but a short time, however. Within the less than a year that they lived together she says that Dalton bought for her as a present a pair of shoes and a certain number of gloves. He wouldn't give her any money with which to buy stockings, she said, but also declared that she made some for herself out of his old socks.

One month after we were married," said Mrs. Dalton, "he began to find fault at something, but what I don't know. He threw me on the bed and choked me. I became unconscious, and was only brought to by his dashing water in my face."

Put Arm in Sling.

"Again on May 8 he pushed me into a corner, grabbed me around the throat and choked me. I thought he was crazy as he could. This time his treatment of me brought on nervous prostration. For 14 I was standing up and my husband told me to sit down. Because I didn't move as fast as he thought I ought to, he grabbed me and dashed me against the kitchen ledge. I had on a bracelet at the time which pushed itself in my flesh. On account of this I had to carry my arm in a sling for a month, and had to have it bandaged for another four weeks.

"One day later he wanted to know what time it was. Before I was able to answer him he sprang at me again and threw me another severe shaking. He called me a cry-baby, swore at me and told me I was no good to stay; and then before he was through with me he would knock me unconscious. A few weeks after that I took my things and went home to my mother, and I have seen him here ever since."

Called Her "Cry-Baby."

Mrs. Dalton stated to Judge Crosby that her husband's pet epithet was "cry-baby," and that he made use of the term with great frequency. Her husband often swore at her, and he had also locked her in her apartments.

"On one occasion," continued Mrs. Dalton, "when we were at the Charlesgate we were at the table eating breakfast. I had just ordered some coffee and rolls, when my husband called the waiter back and told him to pay no attention to the orders I gave, that he would do the ordering for both."

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABOR COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

The Boston School House Commission has notified the firm doing work on new school houses in this city that it must live up to the wage scale and working conditions as recognized by the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union. This action by the Commission is the result of a protest from the local union. The contract agreement provides that 42½ cents an hour be paid for all metallic work, and from 40 to 45 cents for wood lathing. It also provides for an eight-hour day, with four hours on Saturday. The notification of the School House Commission to the firm states that any failure to comply with union conditions is a violation of contract and an infringement of the law of the city.

A communication was received from the Oliver Metallic Company stating that there were places for twenty lathers in New York at $4.20 a day. All of the lathers employed on the Siegel building who have finished their work have been notified to go to New York.

A mass meeting will be held next Wednesday night at the Wells Memorial building to consider drawing up a wage scale for wood lathers. The men ask for present rewrite $3.20 and $3.60 a day. A protest was made against non-union lathers, now employed on the new Douglas Hospital at Brockton.

SPEED TRIALS FOR CUP CARS

NEW YORK, May 11.—Contrary to the first intentions the American cars entered in the International Automobile Cup race are to be given a speed trial in the vicinity of this city. The test will probably take place in Long Island within two weeks and will be under the direction and observation of the racing committee of the Automobile Club of America.

The cars which will be given the test are those owned by Colonel A. A. Pope of Boston, Dr. H. H. Thomas of Chicago and W. H. Lutz of Buffalo. The cars are a Locomobile, while the other two are Pope-Toledos.

OFFICER SHOOTS AT BOLD FOOTPADS

Patrolman Casey, of Court Square Station, early to-day fired five shots from his revolver at two footpads who held up and attempted to rob Fred Williams, a seaman aboard the vessel Robert Drury, now lying in the harbor.

The two men held Williams up near the corner of Atlantic avenue and Central street. He cried for help, and as Casey ran toward the men the footpads broke away. He commanded them to stop, but they kept on running. He then emptied the contents of his revolver at them, but the shots went wild.

CHASE 3 BOYS; PISTOL FIRED

A horde of police officers, attracted by the firing of a revolver at an early hour this morning, joined in the pursuit of three boys whom it was believed had held up and robbed a pedestrian on Court street.

George B. Nute, night watchman at the Puritan Trust Company, was the man who fired the shot and started the police and half a hundred citizens on the chase after the boys. Nute says he was looking out of the window of the trust company building when he saw the boys stop a man and rob him at the time. When the men took out his watch the boys grabbed it and ran. Nute ignored the command to halt, and Patrolman Johnquist, Lieutenant Hyland and a score of returning officers from their night watch joined in the exciting chase, which ended in the capture of the three, the last being caught on School street. The boys were released later, no complaint being made.

TAKING COAL FROM TENDER; LOSES LEG

Martin Flaherty of No. 42 Gold street, South Boston, jumped from the stone retaining wall under the bridge at that street to the tender of a freight train which had stopped in the cut. He threw off coal until the train started, and then jumped for the wall. Missing his hold, he fell under the train and the wheels mangled his leg so badly that it was amputated at the thigh.

KLAUS WROTE BIG VOLUME OF LOVE MISSIVES

Never Kissed Fiancee, But Went On Smoking Probation.

CHAPERON FOR WOOING

Special to the Boston American.

PITTSBURG, May 11.—The two hundred and fifteen love letters written by Attorney Klaus J. Stoever to Miss Edith Isabella Gibney, a prominent society girl of St. Louis, are bound in a book two feet long, a foot wide and eight inches thick. She is suing him for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise. Stoever is a young consulting engineer.

The most legal and legislative metaphors in making love by pen. Three samples are:

"My Dear Portia—Beware of the law. Love knows it not, and it hath no use for love. It feeds on the fragments of the rents that hold the noble passion and oft hesitates not to tar the wax that fragments might be provided for its unhallowed feast.

"Yours, SLATS."

This was sent accompanying a book on some weighty legal subjects.

His Wooing in Poetry.

Exhibit No. 1 was as follows:

"To my little girl—
It matters not how dull the book!

Each word I read spells 'dear.'
Each page shows forth a sweet girl's face;
Oh, could it be but near!"

Exhibit No. 2 was one of the time when the family of Steiner agreed to the marriage, and began as follows:

"My Dearest Little Girl:

"Well, we've got to think. The house went into executive session, and after a final reading and discussion the Steiner-Gibney bill was passed unanimously. Hurrah! I wonder you didn't hear that clear, down at St. Louis."

Miss Gibney, who is winsome and beautiful, astonished the jury by stating that Stoever never kissed her, even when they became affianced.

"He said," she testified, "that he would stop smoking in order to purify himself for the time when he would kiss me. When he came to St. Louis to meet my mother for my hand, he got down on his knees to her and begged for me. He was out of the engagement because of his mother, father and sisters. They had written to their brother and I spent a week there. After I left they talked about me to Klaus. They treated me coolly while I was their guest. They were unable to tell him to his face that I would not let Klaus smoke in the house, and that I disliked it. They said it was not nice without a chaperon."

Miss Gibney is also suing her sweetheart's relatives for $50,000.

NUN OPPOSES LAWYER'S WORD

Sister Mary Madaline of Fitchburg Testifies in the Boyle Will Case.

Sister Mary Madaline of a convent in Fitchburg, and before becoming a nun known as Annie L. Grover, a stenographer in a Worcester law office, testified to-day on the witness stand the testimony of James Higgins, a lawyer who drew up one will of Mrs. Hannah E. Boyle, of No. 7 Hill street, Dorchester, which she is now being contested by Daniel L. Boyle of Fitchburg.

In this will Mrs. Boyle leaves her daughter $1, saying she knew she would be well cared for by her brother, Matthew P. Callahan, to whom she left the bulk of her estate, valued at about $15,000. She appointed her brother the guardian of her daughter. The girl is said to have about $12,000 in her own right.

Daniel A. Boyle of Fitchburg, uncle of the girl, and brother of Mrs. Boyle's husband, is contesting the will. He also asks for the appointment of the girl's guardian.

Lawyer Higgins testified that the document was written in his office, and when shown the testatrix, Sister Mary Madaline testified that she knew the testatrix well, and that her brother, Callahan, showed her a will. She saw the girl in bed at that time, Mrs. Boyle.

Dr. Edmund Parker testified that Mrs. Boyle had been employed as a stenographer in his office, and when shown the will and deed in court, said he did not think that she knew the contents well, and that her brother, Callahan, showed her a will.

The hearing was continued to-day before Judge Grant in the Suffolk Probate Court.

The presentation was made by Mary A. Livermore, and as she gave the gift to Mr. Blackwell cheers and applause rang through the hall. He responded briefly, thanking the ladies sincerely, and said that it had always been his object to further their interests in every way.

Among the guests were ex-Governor George D. Robinson and Mrs. Robinson, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, Rev. Edward Cummings, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, William Lloyd Garrison, Harry Blackwell and Mrs. Blackwell, Mrs. Edward Cummings and John Hutchinson.

WOODS SCOURED FOR LOST MAN

NEWFIELD, Me., May 11.—The woods for miles around are being scoured to find Dr. K. G. Reynolds, a well-known physician, who has disappeared. Dr. Reynolds has been in ill health for several weeks. He went out for a two days' drive ago and has not been heard from since.

19TH SUICIDE IN ONE FAMILY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

DANBURY, Ct., May 11.—David Briggs, a Brookfields farmer, the nineteenth member of his family to end his life, was found drowned to-day. He threw himself into a mill pond on the outskirts of Bridgeport Sunday night.

Those suicides in the family have followed at intervals of a few years for nearly half a century. Six years ago Andrew Briggs, a rich farmer, weighted himself with a stone tied to a dog rope fastened about his neck and plunged into a pond. His neighbors found a stick fastened at the edge of the pond pointing to the place where the body lay.

The fortieth annual report of the managers of the New England Home for Little Wanderers shows that during the year 400 children were cared for at the home, and 334 placed with good families. Receipts $88,081, expenditures $28,962.

FEDERAL ACTION MAY COME IN CHICAGO CRISIS

Labor Leaders Take Two Views of President Roosevelt's Utterances.

STRIKE PLANS RENEWED

CHICAGO, May 11.—Federal interference in the teamsters' strike became more sharply a point of discussion to-day in reason of the injunction and petition to the President for the labor leaders into the situation.

It had been given out by President Shea, of the Teamsters' Union, that all efforts to reach the ear of the President had been abandoned. Meanwhile arrangements were made to meet the President at the Auditorium on his return from the Hamilton Club reception. The labor leaders assert they are well pleased with the manner in which the President received them, but nevertheless, in view of what the Chief Executive had to say and his inferential remarks that Mayor Dunne would receive government support if necessary, there is an undercurrent of opinion that perhaps the only advantage gained by the move is an accentuation in an official manner of their position in this strike.

The President's reference to the "unfortunate phrasing" of the statement is taken as a hint that President Roosevelt was not entirely pleased with the document. The leaders to-day settled down to renewed plans of activity.

The employers are jubilant. The moral influence of the President's presence has given them added courage to prosecute the fight, and, most unequivocal statements are made that there is to be no recession in the position taken. One of the prominent members of the Employers' Association has stated that the merchants will close their stores if necessary before they will yield to the strikers.

The talk now is heard of involving the Illinois Manufacturers' Association to the extent that the latter shall insist on the delivery of goods to any and all houses that contract for the same, whether "boycotted" or not. If the plan carries a more important spread of the strike than has yet developed may be looked for.

Orders were issued by the Labor Committee to have printed 1,500 copies of the memorial to the President, to be sent to papers in the country, and to-day sixty-three central labor bodies in the various cities.

The fifth death in the strike roster is that of George W. Pierce, who was shot and killed by George W. Waldron, a guard of the Wells Fargo express wagon. Pierce, striking teamster, opened the express wagon last night and recognizing Waldron as a fellow striker, addressed him in sarcastic words.

Waldron, it is claimed, drew his pistol and fired, the bullet finding lodgment in Pierce's heart. Waldron ran to the Wells Fargo office with the surrender to the police, and was captured. He would make no statement. Pierce, Wright, aged nineteen, was shot in the thigh by a man on an express wagon at whom a brick was thrown.

The employers state that they will to-day send out 2,500 wagons.

OLD OPERATOR DEAD AT SUMMER HOME

Leonard C. Wedmore, for years chief operator and night manager in the Western Union's Springfield office, died to-day in his Summer home at Hough's Neck. He had been ill for months.

He was born in New Haven fifty years ago, and was one of the best known telegraphers in the country. When President Cleveland was nominated, Mr. Wedmore worked twenty-four hours without leaving the key.

LOSES SUIT OVER TOE.

ALFRED, Me., May 11.—A jury has decided for the defendant in the case of of Hiram F. Chapman, of Revere, Mass., against Dr. Frank Smith, of York, Me., in which the plaintiff alleged the physician did not properly amputate a toe.

SUSPECT FOUL PLAY IN DEATH OF YALE MAN

Medical Examiner's Report of "Suicide" Not Accepted by Part of Student Body.

HEARD SOUNDS OF SCUFFLE

Special to the Boston American.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 11.—The mystery surrounding the death by a bullet wound of Hasseltine Bartlett, the second son of Arthur Hasseltine, of Cleveland, O., a Yale senior, whose body was found in a pool of blood in the woods on Wells Hill, grows deeper the more the tragedy is investigated.

The conclusion of Medical Examiner Bartlett, that the fatal bullet wound was probably self-inflicted, and the opinion of Coroner Mix, based upon the medical examiner's report, to the same effect, are by no means accepted as final.

The campus and faculty are divided in the theories of death by accident or suicide, with a small fraction of the student body thinking that it might have been caused accidentally or wilfully by a second party.

Had Been to a Dance.

There are several mystifying features to Hasseltine's death. In a diary which the student kept, the last entry he made is as follows:

"Sunday, May 7—Returned to-day from a dance at Wells College, Aurora, N. Y. Never had a better time in my life."

Hasseltine left New Haven last Friday for the dance at Wells College, which is an institution for girls, on lake Cayuga, N. Y. He returned Sunday, tired, but in good spirits.

The entry would indicate that Hasseltine was fully entertained during his visit, serve to upset the theory of suicide. He attended chapel and one recitation in the morning and was in his room at 9:50 o'clock, when his roommates, Roy W. Hemingway of Syracuse, N. Y., and Willis T. Hanson, Jr., left him.

Heard Pistol Shot.

About 10 o'clock "Rosy" Stevenson, a senior, heard what is now supposed to have been the pistol shot while passing Welch Hall. He thought it was a chair cracking in a scuffle and paid no attention to it.

At 10:30 o'clock Hasseltine's two roommates returned. They found Hasseltine lying in a pool of blood in his bedroom. The pistol was under him. The furniture was not disturbed, but those who heard the supreme theory of a scuffle say it is a pity that Stevenson did not investigate.

An uncle of the dead student has arrived from Cleveland. His theory is that the far West on a business trip and could not come on the meeting of the senior class was held at noon and resolutions were drawn up and a vote passed to wear a mourning button for thirty days.

Third Violent Death.

The class of 1905 has been unusually ill-fated. In its four years at Yale it has lost six members.

Hasseltine is the third member in the class to meet a violent death and the second to shoot himself.

Bowman Ecbey shot himself in a New York hotel two years ago, after suffering from injuries received in a fall out of Pierson dormitory.

Robert J. Rich threw himself from West Rock shortly after this and was killed to death.

Hasseltine's body will be taken to Cleveland to-day for burial.

WATCHING FIRES; KILLED BY TRAIN

NASHUA, N. H., May 11.—Patrick Downs, aged about 60, a real estate owner of Greenville, N. H., and prominent in town affairs, was instantly killed by a train, and his two companions only escaped by jumping from the bandstand in which they were watching forest fires down the line of the railroad.

"PE-RU-NA SAVED MY LIFE,"

Writes Mrs. W. McRoberts.

MRS. W. McROBERTS.

Mrs. W. McRoberts, Delano, Minn., writes as follows:

"I feel perfectly well of catarrh. I did as you directed me to do and used Peruna and Manalin. The third of March I gave birth to a 10-pound baby girl and we are both well and happy. I am very thankful to you and Peruna saved my life. I recommend it to everyone and cannot praise it enough."

"I send you my own and my baby's picture. She is so sweet and good. She is a Peruna baby. I have such good health now. I do all my housework and take care of my baby and feel so good. There are three or four of my neighbors using Peruna now, since it did me so much good."

When a mother is healthy, her children are healthy.

A healthy mother is calm, serene, strong-minded.

Peruna protects the health and promotes the harmony in the home by making the mother strong and free from nervousness.

Mothers all over the land are the best friends of Peruna.

COUNT SAID HE HAD MILLIONS IN BOSTON; HELD

Czaykowski, Who Married Miss Edith Collins and Divorced by Her, Is Arrested.

CHARGE, FALSE PRETENSES

PARIS, May 11.—Count Czaykowski, from whom his wife, who was Miss Edith L. Collins of Boston and New York, secured a decree of separation last November, was recently arrested, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses from Parisaet & Loisler, the Paris bankers. The bankers state that the Count secured an advance from them in order that he might proceed to the United States and claim a fortune of $20,000,000, which he said he had inherited from a Boston relative named Clarke.

Parisaet & Loisler claim that they received in repayment a check for $4,000, drawn by a Boston solicitor, but that when it was presented payment had been stopped.

As the count demanded a further advance and delayed his departure, he was arrested. Count Czaykowski was released on bail. The Turkish embassy intervened, it is said, and the Sultan ordered the count to return to Turkey, where he now is.

Count Czaykowski married Edith L. Collins in Paris on January 7, 1897. Miss Collins was a daughter of Clarence L. Collins, of New York city. On her father's side were two Colonial Governors, William Bradford, of Massachusetts, and William Leete, of Connecticut, and she was a ward of Senator Chauncey M. Depew.

HOTEL BURNED BY FIREBUG

ALTON BAY, N. H., May 11.—The town officials and residents think the fire which destroyed the big Lake Winnipesaukee House, the largest Summer resort on the lake, to which hundreds of Boston people have come, was set by some one.

The hotel was unoccupied at the time of the fire, and the owner, C. H. McAlpine, of Dover, says the fire could not have been started by anything except a firebug. The hotel had sixty-five rooms and was a three-story wooden structure. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

MISS CLEMENS UNDER KNIFE

NEW YORK, May 11.—Miss Clara Clemens, eldest daughter of Mark Twain, has been operated upon successfully for appendicitis. Her father was in an adjoining room during the trying period, but expressed great gratification when the attending physicians announced that she had rallied strongly upon the completion of their work. Unless unforeseen complications set in Miss Clemens will speedily recover.

The operation was performed in a private hospital uptown by Dr. Frank Hartley of 64 West Forty-ninth street, assisted by Dr. Edward Quitman, of No. 144 West Thirty-eighth street.

Miss Clemens is a professional singer. She is an attractive, dark-haired, dark-eyed girl, and possesses unusual musical talent. She has inherited a ready wit from her father.

MISSING HIGH SCHOOL GIRL FOUND WITH ENFIELD FRIEND

LINA D. GORDON.

PALMER SCHOOL GIRL MISSING SIX DAYS

Picture and Story of Disappearance From Palmer, Printed in American, Led to Discovery.

Special to the Boston American.

PALMER, May 11.—Seventeen-year-old Lina D. Gordon, daughter of Alexander Gordon, the North Dana machinist, who has been missing from her boarding place in Palmer since last Friday, has been located in Enfield. The photograph and story of her disappearance printed in the BOSTON AMERICAN led to her finding.

Because she tired of studying and wanted to leave school is given by the girl as her reasons for going away from Palmer.

Friday night, after going to Enfield to play with friends, she wrote to her father informing him of her whereabouts. The letter was miscarried and the father did not receive it.

Police Were Notified.

The girl has been staying in Palmer with the family of Fred Stone, while she attended the High School. Her hard working father wanted the girl to have a good education and as North Dana does not have a High school he sent her to Palmer, where she might derive the benefits of a High school training.

Since her disappearance the father has been deeply grieved, fearing that the girl had met with some mishap. It was thought she might have jumped or fallen into the Quaboag river. The case was put into the hands of Sheriff Nye, A. Police of Boston and other Massachusetts cities were notified. The father started out on his own responsibility to locate the girl, visiting Springfield and other towns where he thought she might have gone to visit friends.

LACKEY FAILS TO GET DIVORCE

OMAHA, Neb., May 11.—Thomas R. Lackey, two years ago superintendent of the Salem (Mass.) offices of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, and for a time in charge of offices on Dudley street, Boston, has been refused a divorce from his wife.

Lackey sued on the grounds that attempts had been made on his life. He testified that he had taken out $18,000 insurance in favor of his wife, and twice started a stroke to find the gas pipe open, and his wife in hysterics. After the second attempt Lackey took his departure and locked the door.

His wife, who is now living in St. Louis has secured a decree granting separate maintenance from Lackey, and corroborative evidence is produced.

Lackey is about forty-three years old and had a daughter, who married Oliver Robinson, of Roxbury. She took a morphine dose. He is regarded as a good business man, but was not popular in Salem. He left Boston for the West about two years ago, and has since been identified with the Fidelity Mutual Life, of Philadelphia.

RAFT CAPSIZED; BOYS MISSING

PORTLAND, Me., May 11.—An overturned pleasure raft found in the harbor gives evidence of the probable death by drowning of Bernard Stubbs, fifteen years of age; Paul Sawyer, fourteen, and Robert Sawyer, twenty-one, who went out in a float and were caught in a heavy blow. The only hope of the friends of the young men entertain is that they may have been picked up by one of the small boats near Falmouth Foreside and a search of those islands will be made.

HANDS CRACKED AND PEELED

Suffered for One Year — Water Caused Agony, Heat Intense Pain — Grew Worse Under Doctors — Could Not Do Any Housework.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE BY CUTICURA

"About a year ago my hands began to crack and peel. I tried many remedies, but they grew worse all the time. At last they became so sore that it was impossible for me to do my housework. If I put my hands in water, I was in agony for hours; and if I tried to cook over the stove, the heat caused intense pain. I consulted a doctor, but his treatment was entirely useless. I gave him up and tried another, but without the least satisfaction. About six weeks ago I got my first relief when I purchased Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using them for a week I found to my great delight that my hands were beginning to feel much better, the deep cracks began to heal up and stop running, and to-day my hands are entirely well, the one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment being all that I used. (signed) Mrs. Minnie Drew, 18 Dana St., Roxbury Mass."

ONE NIGHT TREATMENT For Sore Hands and Feet with Cuticura

Soak the hands or feet on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure. Wear on the hands during the night old, loose gloves, or bandage the feet lightly in old, soft cotton or linen.

CHAMPS MAY NOT BE ABLE TO PLAY TO-DAY

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE IN DETROIT FOR FIRST GAME WITH THE TIGERS.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Boston American staff correspondent with the team.

DETROIT, May 11.—The Champs got in early to-day and found lowering skies awaiting them. Rain had fallen, and it looked like more, so there is a possibility that the game this afternoon may be postponed.

Dineen left Boston a day or two in advance of his team mates, but joined the party when the train reached Syracuse last night. Mrs. Selbach came up from Columbus, O., to meet her husband here.

Captain Collins came very near having to lay off for a few days. A new pair of shoes rubbed a big sore on his heel, and when he got on the train at Boston yesterday he could barely walk. Old Doctors Gibson and Burkett took him in hand and applied diamond poultices all night, and this morning there was relief.

Collins's uniform was left behind in his grip, the train starting in from the Trinity place station before the porter could get all the baggage aboard. Freeman Green's suit case was also left behind, but the missing baggage will be here later to-day.

The Tigers have been playing good ball this season, as they showed in their series with the Clevelands, which they won very handily. Consequently, they expect to do well against Collins's aggregation.

George Winter in all probability will do the pitching for the visitors, while "Wild Bill" Donovan will probably serve up the benders for the locals.

Winter has been doing the best work of any of the Champs's staff this season. He has acquired the split ball and has absolute control over that new wrinkle. Moreover, he is learning to bat, and is becoming quite a formidable wielder of the stick.

Although Donovan has been in none too good form this season, he has shown much better condition of late and is ready to take the bull by the horns. He is anxious to take a fall out of the Champs, and will summon all his courage to do the trick.

The schedule which arranged for a series of four games between the locals and Detroit during the blue ribbon meeting here, has induced President Taylor of Boston and Manager Armour of Detroit to agree to play these games, or as many as they can on foreign fields.

The first advance games between the clubs will be played at Dayton, O., next Sunday, the two clubs journeying from Detroit to Dayton early Sunday morning.

PITCHER LUNDGREN OF COLTS

Umpires—Rauswinn and Connolly.

This is Rogers's day at the South End grounds, and there is sure to be a large crowd out to contribute their mite to increase the fund which will be tendered the widow of the late business manager of the Boston Nationals.

The Colts will do the attraction, and they guarantee to give the Tenneylites a good run for their money. In the two games yesterday the teams divided the spoils. The first game was taken by the Bostons after a ninth inning rally, and the second game was captured in rather easy fashion by the visitors.

Pfeffer, a recruit from the Illinois University, will probably toe the mark this afternoon. All is a matter of whom many good things have been said, and should he live the Tenneylites there undoubtedly will be a hilt called in the batting streak of the locals.

Weimer Wants Revenge.

If Pfeffer doesn't show up in the preliminary practice to suit Manager Frank Selee, Jake Weimer, who went into the box yesterday, but who lasted only one inning, will probably essay to fool the Tenneylites. He smarts under the beating that was given him yesterday, and he is anxious to illustrate the saying "He who laughs last laughs best."

"Young Cy" Young or Dick Harley will go into the box for the Bellfords. Young continues to put up the same kind of ball.

It was Lachance's visiting day and he saw everybody, including Manager Frank Selee and Fred Tenney.

Jack O'Neil is doing exercise behind the bat. The old vet chases everything and still thinks he can play ball.

Manager Selee is anxious about his conditioning department and tried out Mc-Carthy, the Lynn catcher, before the game and may sign him.

Maloney was very accommodating by stopping Bill Dinneen with a throw to catch him off second. It was an awful crack, but the Athletics boy did not seem to mind it.

HARVARD NINE OFF FOR PENN CONTEST

BASEBALL:

The Harvard baseball squad will leave Cambridge for Philadelphia this afternoon for the first game of the year with the University of Pennsylvania on Saturday. A large squad of men will be taken, seventeen men in addition to coaches, managers and trainer. The squad will be: Captain Bancroft, Coolidge, Stephenson, Kendig, Matthews, Leonard, Kernan, McCarty, Dexter, Spencer, Tweed, Bradbury, Schoenfus, Castle, Stone, Snyder and Brodrick.

The start will be made from Cambridge at 4 o'clock.

CREW:

The Harvard 'Varsity crew had a disappointing time row over the three-mile course on the Charles—the time, 18 minutes and 50 seconds, was slow. In the next two miles the second picked the 'Varsity up and beat them by two lengths in that distance. George was again out of the 'Varsity and Corbett took his place.

The order of the crews were: 'Varsity, stroke, Farley; seven, Corbett; six, Fiske; five, Lawson; four, Pleasanton; three, Flint; two, Tappan; bow, Bundard.

Second, stroke, Shepard; seven, Edwards; six, Hooper; five, Reber; four, Leoul; three, Kellogg; two, Gill; bow, Lilly.

TECH MEN ARE FIT FOR AMHERST MEET

The dual meet between Amherst and Technology, which will take place Saturday, in Brookline, promises to be a close competition. Last year the Tech team won by the small margin of two points, and as the teams are practically the same another exciting set of games is expected.

Amherst seems to be the favorite in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, while the mile, two mile, pole vault, high jump and the hammer throw are easily in Tech's favor. The other events are more or less uncertain, owing to a stirring up of the Tech team by Coach Mahan. Last week he suspended seven men for not keeping in training, and as some of these are crack athletes there is considerable worry as to filling their places.

Knapp, Tech's hammer thrower, is in excellent condition and is expected to break his own record in this event of 124 feet 9 inches, which he made less than a month ago in the Tech Spring meet. The entry list contains some of the best New England athletes, and some crack sprinters. The entries are:

880-yard run—Amherst, Bailey, Stearns, Orrell, Thayer and Waite; Tech, Wilson, Blackburn, Thayer, Rockingham and Fiske.

One-mile run—Amherst, White, Hale, Waite, Thayer, Freeman, Holt; Tech, Wilson, Bunting, Chapman, Marcy and Allen.

Two-mile run—Amherst, White, Hale, Waite, Thayer, Holt and Freeman; Tech, Callaway, Chapman, Marcy and Allen.

High jump—Amherst, Rollins, Howard, Burg, Roberts, Stamm and Rogers; Tech, Child, Schenck, Fuller and Lindley.

Hammer throw—Amherst, Burg, Rollins, Roberts, Rogers, Stamm and Hubbard; Tech, Knapp, Goodnick, Lindley and Tellow.

Discus throw—Amherst, Orrell, Rollins, Hubbard, Dieli and Roberts; Tech, Goumlock, Allen, Tellow and Friedman.

Pole vault—Amherst, Orrell, Stearns, White, Keith, Richenaker and Washburn; Tech, Fiske, Ruggles, Blackburn, Howe, Loomis and Hertz.

Broad jump—Amherst, Hubbard, Morton, Read, Johnson, Keith and L. H. Hubbard; Tech, Young, Edmunds, Goldthwaite and Baldwin.

M'GOVERN GOT BAD BEATING

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Tommy Murphy of New York gave Hughey McGovern of Brooklyn a decisive beating at the National Athletic Club. In the second time these boys have met in Philadelphia and they packed the house to the doors. The bout was one of the fastest ever seen here.

In the sixth round Murphy went after McGovern like a demon and had him on queer street, and only by getting a grip around Murphy's neck and hanging on like grim death for fully fifteen seconds, with the referee trying to break the men did he last out the round.

GARDNER MAY MEET RYAN

NEW YORK, May 11.—Teddy Murphy, acting in behalf of Jimmy Gardner, the Lowell lightweight, states that he has received several offers for the services of the crack Eastern boxer.

The matchmaker of a club at Butte, Mont., would like to bring Gardner and Buddy Ryan together between May 21 and 25. The weight limit is 142 pounds at 3 o'clock, and Gardner is willing to accept. If Ryan evades the issue, Martin Duffy or Honey Mellody will take his place.

From Denver comes an offer of a match with Eddie Smith of Cripple Creek. Gardner will take on Smith at 142 pounds ringside and agree to scale 136 pounds at 3 o'clock for O'Keefe.

WALSH WILL MEET GIBBS

Jimmy Walsh and Young Gibbs of Philadelphia have been matched to meet at the Douglas A. C. in two weeks. This looks like another clinch for the Newton boy, who is in a class by himself when the bouts are glanced over. Bonne O'Brien is the boy the fans want to see fare Jimmy, as there is all kinds of speculation as to the merits of the pair. Walsh will not concede one pound to O'Brien, but will give away weight to a lot of outside youngsters.

INSTRUCTIVE BASEBALL ARTICLES WRITTEN BY THE CHAMPIONS

The BOSTON AMERICAN will print a series of instructive articles of interest to all baseball lovers, written by the Boston Champions on how the different positions are played and the batting and fielding features that figure so prominently in the winning of games.

These sketches will appeal to the fans and ball players alike as they are written by the authorities in their respective classes who are recognized as leaders in the profession and are fully capable to discuss a subject so familiar to them. Articles of this character always meet with instantaneous approval and especially coming from those who have been followed so closely and known so well in the diamond world will immediately be read with interest and digested to add to one's baseball knowledge, and to become better acquainted with the demands on a player who stands at the head in his position. The first article will appear next Monday.

IN JUSTICE TO PAT DOUGHERTY

Boston, May 10.

Sporting Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Two or three fans at the game Wednesday afternoon asked me to say to "Why Collins released Pat Dougherty," and were not satisfied with your statement.

If I were a reporter as a baseball paper will lend you to allow us a few words in justice to Dougherty. In spite of what you say Pat certainly was one of the "world beaters" and did his full share to achieve the result. This is beyond question.

King Kelly used to make lots of errors and could not play a good game. All ball players make errors, but in spite of any error Pat Dougherty is a player of wonderful telling power, because so fast. Last year he was handicapped by either not being in condition or by a sore hand.

Every player has his weak point, and Pat's is batting. He is a natural hitter, and if he could only get his batting eye he would be a star. Pat certainly was one of the "world beaters" and did his full share to achieve the result. This is beyond question.

A great leader-off, thrower, batsman, catcher, and base runner. Pat stands next to Keeler because of his wonderful power of hitting. Of course, Keeler is the more finished player as a waiter, running and as a clever "scientific." But of outfielders, in power and value, next to Keeler comes Dougherty.

O'ROURKE BEATEN BY THE KANGAROO

Charlie O'Rourke, one of the best boys of his weight and measure in his day, went to the well once too often, as he was forced to take defeat at the hands of George Gunther, the Melbourne Kangaroo, in ten rounds at the Douglas A. C. Arena. The fact that O'Rourke had beaten the colored fighter once and had the better of a draw decision made the outcome entirely unexpected and the ending was a big surprise to the fans.

While the men were going the tenth round came the first indications that O'Rourke was in a bad way, as he went down for the count under a fusillade of blows. Gunther rushed the well beaten boy out of a tight place. When the gong sounded for the eleventh round O'Rourke failed to respond and his seconds threw up the sponge in token of defeat.

Savage Affair from Start.

From the start it was a savage affair, in which science counted for nothing, and the men stand up and biff as fast as each could hand out the wallops and brute strength was the factor that was to decide the winner.

It was not the same O'Rourke who had faced the dusky boy in his previous bouts and he did not have the snap or ability to body pounding in which the mill developed. He landed often and had enough to stop numerous fighters, but Gunther was like a stone statue for all the impression made on him.

While O'Rourke was whipping left hooks on his opponent's head and neck, Gunther was steadily boring in with crushing rights to the ribs that gradually wore the Cambridge boy down.

There was nothing about the match of a scientific nature, as the pair were in the mood for mixing the affair at short notice and it was a case of let it go as soon as separated irrespective as to where the punches were going. Gunther was particularly wild in his delivery and missed continually, but his bulldog makeup made O'Rourke's task too great.

In Early Rounds O'Rourke Aggressor.

In the early rounds O'Rourke waded in and planted some handsome hooks that may have made a dent in a plank, but Gunther was made of mettle and passed them up and swung several wild ones himself that reached the spot to some extent. At the latter distance point the harder O'Rourke landed the better the advantage seemed to be, and returned for more with the fury of an untamed savage. After three rounds he be gained speed, and when O'Rourke missed the latter tendency of getting a breathing spell Gunther was at him like a vicious tiger. The strain was too great and the sweating he was getting on the body evidently began to tell, which increased Gunther's courage and he took desperate chances to terminate the scrap.

The preliminaries were of short duration, as the fans were not overly matched. Young Cragy of Charlestown went after Harry Edels of Chelsea and it was called off in the second round as Edels was barely recovering his eyesight, as they have been he had a prize package handed to him in the first round and the warfare was stopped in the third to save Henderson.

TIGERS WIN GREAT GAME

PRINCETON, N. J., May 11.—The most remarkable baseball game in Princeton annals was played with Amherst and finally won by Princeton with a single run, after eighteen innings of exciting fielding. Don Doyle, one of Princeton's less distinguished pitchers, held the box for the entire contest, equivalent to two games, and twirled in splendid form. Both Doyle of Amherst shared the pitching honors and allowed only one base on balls.

LACHANCE FOR MONTREAL

Candy Lachance has signed with the Montreal Club and will report for work on Saturday. Pat Powers, President of the Eastern League, came on here from New York expressly to see Lachance and succeeded in selling the Candyman. He says in terms of Although Candy will get a big salary with Montreal, Powers thinks that it will be worth while, as "Big George" is of French-Canadian origin and should prove a drawing card. The Tebeau boy was also sold Fred O'Brien, the East Boston pitcher, to play with Toledo, of the American Association.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please give me a good formula to whiten the skin. My neck is as brown as a berry and the skin on my face is smooth but not clear. I drink plenty of water and take lots of outdoor exercise. I am stout and eat a good deal, but still my skin isn't clear like some girls. I want a preparation that will not harm the skin.

FROM what you tell me I believe that you will find cucumber cream most effective in your case. It is made as follows:

Cucumber juice	2 ounces
Almond oil	4 ounces
Spermaceti	½ ounce
White wax	1 ounce

Cucumbers ripe enough for table use are the right kind to select. Cut and chop them fine and pound to a paste. Then extract the juice by squeezing through a jelly bag. Perfume this cream with a half drachm of violet extract.

This will serve as a reply to "M. E.," who sends me a letter stating that her face is red all the year round, but especially so when she is around a stove and in the Summer time.

DEAR PROFESSOR:

My dentist must be a peculiar, or at least a very careful, man, for when I asked him what tooth powder would be best for me to use he said simply that there were several good ones, without naming any one. I didn't ask him again, but I now ask you to tell me, for I am anxious to do what is right for the preservation of my teeth. My gums are tender. AGNES W.

I HAVE found through personal experience that prepared chalk is an effective remedy for tender gums when applied twice a day, and it is a most satisfactory basis for all tooth powders.

An excellent antiseptic mouth wash to sweeten the breath is composed of one grain of phenic acid, twenty-five grams of boric acid, thebaic acid in the same things, fifty centigrams of thymol (crystals), ten grams of tincture of anise, thirty drops of essence of menthia, three pints of distilled water. This solution, diluted half with clear water, should be used several times a day.

DEAR PROFESSOR:

There is a certain cold cream that contains benzoin. Will you be so kind as to give me the recipe?

JENNIE R.

HERE is the formula for making a simple cold cream that contains benzoin, and I trust it is the one you desire:

Tincture of benzoin	10 drops
Boric acid	40 drops
Sweet almond oil	½ ounce
Lanoline	½ ounce
Water	1 ounce

Put the two last named ingredients in a double boiler and warm by gentle heat until they can be "creamed." Add the boric acid and, last of all, the benzoin, pouring it in very slowly and beating the mixture all the while.

The Shadow on the Wall

I.

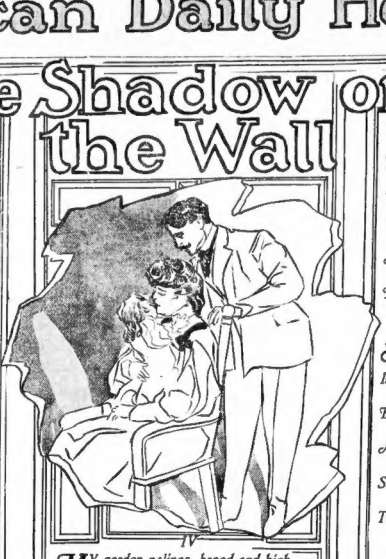
MY home a stately dwelling is,
With lofty, arching doors
With carvings on the ceiling high
And velvet on the floors;
A rich and costly building,
Where noiseless servants wait;
And 'neath th' escutcheon's gilding
None enter but the great.
But a happier home is near it, a humble cottage small,
And I envy its sweet mistress the shadows on the wall.

II.

MY pictures are the pride of art,
And drawn by cunning hands,
But the painted figures never move
Nor change the painted lands.
Before the poorest window
More gorgeous pageants glide,
Within the lowliest household
More life-like groups abide
And I turn from soulless symbols that crowd my gloomy hall —
To watch the shifting shadows upon the cottage wall.

III.

MY stately husband ne'er bends
To kiss me on the lips.
His heart is in his iron safe,
His thoughts are with his ships.
But when the twilight gathers
Adown the crowded street,
The little housewife listens
For sounds of coming feet.
And by the gleaming firelight I see a figure tall
Stoop down to kiss a shadow, a shadow on the wall.



IV.

MY garden palings, broad and high,
Shut in its costly spoils,
And through the ordered paths all day
The silent gardener toils.
My neighbor's is a grass plot,
With hardy buttercup,
Where children's dimpled fingers
Pull dandelions up;
Where on a baby's silken head all day the sunbeams fall,
Till evening cast its shadows upon the cottage wall.

V.

MY petted lapdog, warm and soft,
Nestles upon my knee;
My birds have shut their diamond eyes
That love to look on me;
Lonely I watch my neighbor,
And watching can but weep
To see her rock her darlings
Upon her breast asleep.
Alas! My doves are gentle, my dog comes at my call,
But there is no childish shadow upon my chamber wall.

VI.

MY beauty is the talk of fools,
And by the gaslight glare
In glittering gems and gleaming dress
I know that I am fair;
But there is something fairer;
Whose charm in loving lies,
And there is something dearer—
The light in loving eyes:
So I return triumphant, queen of the brilliant ball,
To enjoy the sweet shadow of the husband-wife on the wall.

VII.

MY earthly lot is rich and high,
And hers is poor and low,
Yet I would give my heritage
Her deeper joys to know;
For husbands that are lovers
Are rare in all the lands,
And hearts grow fill for heaven
Moulded by childish hands:
And while I go up lonely before the Judge of all
A cherub troupe will usher the shadow on the wall.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man and have been keeping company with a young lady for eleven months. I love this girl madly and have been true to her ever since I first met her. She says she loves me in return and wants to marry me as soon as I am able, which will be this Fall. I have never gone out with any other girl since I met her, but she, after promising me she would not go out with any one, did so. I saw her coming out of a theatre. She said she cares for no one but me. Kindly advise me what to do, for I am always suspicious of her on the evenings that I am not with her. I make $2 a day, which she said she could live on easily. She is a good housekeeper and makes all her own clothes, also she is very economical and saves all she can. I do not drink, but I smoke and that she dislikes very much. Shall I give her up or trust her, as I want to marry her this Fall and do not want to make a mistake in life.

Salem SUSPICIOUS.

SHE certainly should not have gone out if she promised you she would not, but when she sees how you dislike her doing so I have no doubt she will not do it again. If you are going to be suspicious of her every action you will make life miserable for both of you. If you cannot trust her you had much better not marry her. It is insulting to her to be constantly suspicious of her.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years of age, and for the past year I have been keeping company with a man twenty-seven years of age who is very much in love with him. We are engaged to be married, but I do not like his conduct toward me. He very seldom takes me out, and when he does he does flirt with other girls, and when I ask him who they are he will say: "It is none of your business, I am a man and can do as I please." But I must not notice anyone, or even visit my dearest friends. My father is very cranky and scolds me, all on account of this young man, and when I tell my friend he laughs at me, and this provokes me very much, for I think he could marry me if he wanted to, as he has a salary of $15 a week, and I could live on that nicely. How can I find out if he loves me? M. G.

I DO not think he is treating you well at all, and if I were you I would break the engagement. It certainly is your business when he flirts with other girls, as he is engaged to you. Of course you could keep house on $15 a week. I think you are wasting your time on him.

If he loved you he would not treat you as he does. At any rate, have a serious talk with him, and let him understand that you will not continue the engagement unless he mends his ways.

WHAT'S THE FUNNIEST THING BABY EVER SAID

I WANT to thank all who had the granting of the Bright Sayings prize, as my little son was one of the lucky ones. He walks around lately with a very important air, and if you should ask him why he feels so big he'll tell you:

"Why, I'm a winner in the BOSTON AMERICAN."

Gratefully yours,

MRS. MAY SCOTT.

No. 24 Essex street, Charlestown.

This is one of many letters received by the Bright Sayings Editor.

Have you landed among the winners? No? Well, you have two days left in which to busy yourself.

Make your letters brief and crisp; give name and age of your child; address Bright Sayings Editor, 80-82 Summer street, Boston.

RESIGNED

ARDENT PATRIOT AT 5

When my little friend Edna, five years of age, heard her mother talk about being a dressmaker she said:

"Oh, mamma, I don't want you to be a dressmaker. I want you to be an American." M. E. HORTON.

Beachmont.

LITERAL OBEDIENCE

I went down stairs for a moment, and told my little boy to sit on his little chair and not get off of it till I came back, or I should punish him. It was not long before I heard him walking around over my head. I went up he was sitting down on the place I left him. I said: "Harrison, did you leave the chair while mamma was downstairs?

"Oh, no, mamma, I just went into the bedroom, but I took the chair with me there." E. RIDDOUT.

California street, Newton.

LADIES FIRST

While going out the other day with my little daughter Pauline, three years old, and nephew, five years old, we happened to pass by a drug store, and both children asked me to let them go to soda. My nephew took the first glass offered, and he tried to drink while my little daughter remarked:

"Don't you think ladies are first? Aren't you, auntie?" MRS. SARAH GREEN.

No. 80 Green street.

FOOT-MOTHER

One day my little girl Virginia Fair, then four and a half, now six, said:

"Oh, mamma, Edmund's got a new mother. I got the kind of a mother you are, but a foot-mother." MRS. C. L. FAIR.

LIKE ROOSEVELT

My little son Casper, three years old, overheard us talking about President Roosevelt being a Rough Rider, and said:

"How can him be President, Wough Wider all at once? I dess I will be dat, too; song's as easy." MRS. T. JORDAN.

TO FEED THE ANGELS

I took my little boy Martin, age four years, to church Easter Sunday morning and after returning I asked him if he was a good boy in church.

"Yes, papa, 'cause, 'cause I put my penny in God's box to buy bread and butter for the angels."

MRS. ANNIE M. FERNEKEES.

GOT HIS BAND

My son, John Tilley, two years old, received a drum last Christmas, and I hung it in the shed until he should need it. He occasionally would see it and cry for it. One day as I was reading the BOSTON AMERICAN I heard a dismal wail from John. A part of the paper had fallen on the floor, and his little eyes alighted on the cut of a young enthusiast on the Bright Sayings Page. I said: "What's the matter, John?" He screamed:

"See, mamma, dat baby's got my band."

MRS. NELLIE TILLEY.

No. 11 Bromfield street, Lawrence.

BELT CHOKING HER

My little sister Bernice, three years of age, is very fond of wearing a belt; even a piece of string will satisfy her.

One night at the breakfast table she had a string tied around her waist for a belt, and when seeing it I presume she her belt got tight, for she exclaimed at a sudden:

"Oh, mamma, my belt's choking me."

MISS E. E. C. TYLER.

No. 196 Main street, Everett.

TO MAKE BABY GROW

While watering my plants one day my little boy Herbert, then three years old, said to me:

"Mamma, what are you throwing all that water on the flowers for?"

I answered: "Because I want them to grow quick."

About an hour after he asked me for a drink of water and went to the cells to his baby sister and commenced throwing the water on her.

"Why, Herbert," I said, "what are you wetting baby like that for?"

He answered: "Cos I wants her to grow fast as me."

MRS. H. JOHNSON.

IRENE RICE

Easy Enough!

ONE day my little niece, Irene Rice, two and one-half years of age, came to her mother and said:

"Mamma, please give me some nails."

On being asked what they were wanted for, she replied:

"I wants to nail dolly's feets in baby sister's mouf, so she tan eat like me."

"HAPPY!" she cried wildly. "I am fearfully afraid!"

"Afraid of what? Certainly not of Mr. Morley Darch. I can reassure you, as far as that gentleman is concerned. You must, Miss Armstrong, you need have no fear that Mr. Darch will trouble you again with his obnoxious attentions and proposals, or that he will trouble your father. You see, I speak as one having full knowledge of all the circumstances of the case."

"But he is going to Holland Holme," she stammered. "He is going to see Stephen Holland—and——"

"Let him go, then," incoolically answered Mr. Braine. "I think Mr. Holland is quite capable of looking after himself, especially where Mr. Morley Darch is concerned."

"But you don't know him!" she protested. "He is a thoroughly bad man—unprincipled, wicked, desperate——"

Mr. Braine smiled feintly.

"Are you afraid," he asked quietly, "that Mr. Darch is going to——"

"Kill Mr. Holland?"

"He is in the mood when he would stop at nothing. Oh, don't think that I am talking about, and I—I am terribly afraid that some harm will come to him. Oh, you must be my friend—our friend—yet I don't know your name; I don't know who or what you are. Help me now, I beg of you, Mr.—Mr.——"

"Selwyn," he said gallantly, and bowed low—"Mr. Richard Selwyn, at your service, to help you to the utmost of his ability."

"But who are you? How do you come here? And—oh, I could not help hearing Mr. Darch call you Fergus Braine!"

"Well, well, what matters it, dear young lady, so long as I am your friend?"

"Yes, you must be that," she said, with quaintly profound earnestness. "Whatever you are, whoever you may be, at any rate you have saved me from a most terrible fate!"

"From being the wife of Morley Darch —eh?"

She nodded.

"Yes; to me that is the most terrible thing that could happen to me."

"There are very few women in the world," said Mr. Braine, "who would regard such a fate in such a light indeed. I might almost say that I know of none. Mr. Darch is young, handsome, accomplished, clever, and—what, perhaps, is very much more to the point nowadays—he is really enormously rich—rich even as riches are counted by you, dear Miss Armstrong, who are the daughter and, we will presume, the heiress of the great Robert Armstrong. Why, you must be aware that Mr. Morley Darch might well be considered a worthy match for any girl. Indeed, I am a little puzzled at finding in the world that any lady in your position can view, for what I have done. He contest with regarding me as your friend; and pray do not mention Mr. Darch's name to Mr. Darch or Mr. Holland's safety. Take my word for it, Morley Darch is far too wise a man, and far too fond of himself and his own precious skin, to risk life by doing anything desperate. Besides, as I have said, I rather fancy Mr. Holland is quite able to look after himself."

The man's half-bantering words had the effect of somewhat reassuring the girl.

"I can't help feeling frightened and nervous, still," she said, "I feel so much that you would prevent Mr. Darch from seeing Stephen Holland—to-night!"

"I do not for a moment contemplate that Mr. Darch and Mr. Holland will meet to-night," said Fergus Braine.

"If I could only think so!"

"You can!" exclaimed Braine, confidently. "Upon you must excuse me now, if you please, because I want to have a few words with your father, and then get back to Mapelin. For the time being, my work is done at Armstrong Towers."

"Before you go, then, Mr. Selwyn," said Mary, "I want you to tell me what you mean just now when you told Mr. Darch that you brought a message from his wife?"

Mr. Braine's face wrinkled with suppressed amusement.

"So you heard that—eh?"

"Of course I heard it. It—it staggered me. Is it true? Oh, tell me what it means! You are so very mysterious, Mr. Selwyn! Surely you don't mean to tell me that Mr. Darch has a wife already—that he is not free to marry?"

"Would that so very much surprise you, dear lady?" asked Braine, whimsically.

"But I had no idea——"

Mr. Braine interrupted her further utterance with an impetuous gesture.

"Miss Armstrong," he said, "I have rendered you a service; now I want you to do something for me." His manner had undergone a very sudden change. "Will you do something for me? Will you promise me something?"

"Indeed, I will," she answered, frankly, "if it is in my power."

"It is a simple thing, and one which, believe me will be to your advantage to promise. I want you to forget that you ever spoke with Fergus Braine, and never refer to it to a living soul."

"But is it True?"

"That does not make any difference," replied Braine. "Will you do as I ask?"

For a moment she hesitated, then said impulsively:

"Yes, I suppose I will. You have a right to ask anything of me."

"Thank you, Miss Armstrong. I trust you. One day perhaps you will understand the nature of my request. Now I have something else to ask you, but whether you do as I ask you or not you may be sure of my entire devotion for yourself. I want you, as soon as possible, to tell your father what you have seen, and what has actually transpired to-night, but the fact as the case might be. To-morrow she will go to Holland Holme, and I shall be there in very different guise."

A rose flush suffused Mary Armstrong's cheeks, and she looked away from Fergus Braine's impertinent gaze.

"I—I suppose so," she answered quietly, "that I can promise that."

"And—and if possible," said Fergus Braine, "I hope so, at any rate, and wish you every joy."

"What a strange man you are," she exclaimed, suddenly looking up into his face with curious bewilderment. "Why do you take such an interest in me and my happiness?"

Mr. Braine shook his head.

"You are young, dear young lady, you will know one day. But, in the meantime, I consider it a piece of good fortune that comes to you without question. Remember what I have said. Now I would ask you to leave me alone for a few minutes, as I have a little business to transact with your father, and I must be back in Mapelin by midnight. Au revoir, Miss Armstrong, au revoir!"

Mr. Braine beamed paternally, bowed and waved away, leaving Mary Armstrong dazed and bewildered.

After all, what argument could she do? She must leave things to take their course, and trust blindly in Fergus Braine and his agency of the enigma of a man who had, as it were, popped out of the square, like Persens, to rescue her from what had seemed her inevitable fate.

Later on Mary Armstrong was to know how much depended upon her decision at this moment. It would have been well for her if, instead of leaving the room with her guests, she had persisted in her original intention of seeing Morley Darch before it was too late.

CHAPTER LXXII.

The Last Appeal.

"AND I shall go back to Holland Holme to wait," Judith Mort had said, when she parted from Fergus Braine close to the Mapelin Gate of Holland Park that same afternoon.

"I will communicate with you there," Braine had replied. "If you do not hear from me before to-night you will know that I have succeeded."

And Judith Mort did as she had said. She waited swiftly back to the house, and at the time she forced back the thoughts that would persist in crowding her brain, and tried to concentrate all her will on the matter immediately in hand.

Stephen Holland—to rule over Holland Holme and be one of the great ones of the great world! That was her goal, then, Mr. Selwyn," said Judith, "I want you to tell me what you mean just now when you told Mr. Darch that you brought a message from his wife?"

Mr. Braine's face wrinkled with suppressed amusement.

"So you heard that—eh?"

Simple Rules for Care of the Hair

KEEPING the head perfectly clean is a great aid to the health of the hair, but just as much harm arises from the overshampooing habit as from too much brushing.

The frequency of shampooing must be regulated by the character of the hair, and the sort of atmosphere to which it is exposed, which varies, naturally, according to the occupation and surroundings of the person whose hair is shampooed.

Except for some unusual condition, not even the most oily head should be shampooed oftener than once in two weeks. Usually once a month is quite often enough, and in the case of very dry hair even a longer interval is a good rule.

In every case where there is a tendency to baldness and great loss of hair, shampooing should be omitted except when cleanliness demands it, for by shampooing you deprive the hair of its natural oil and fairly wash the life out of it.

There is no better shampoo for the hair than an egg, well beaten, with about an ounce of water, and rubbed thoroughly into the scalp.

It should be thoroughly massaged into the roots of the hair with the fingers dipping in front over the forehead and going back to the crown and sides, and then forward and back and forth till the two fingers meet over the top of the head.

Wipe the hair as dry as possible with several towels after it has been thoroughly rinsed. In warm weather it is a simple operation to finish the task in the open air but in Winter it is often necessary to hold the head in a current of warm air and fan it till the hair is dry.

Finish the operation with a thorough brushing, and when every particle of moisture has evaporated, if the tendency of the scalp is to dryness rub in a little olive oil.

In its wonderful adaptability to wash materials or wool suits becoming style and comfort are combined. Whether developed in dainty lace-embroidered lawns, we find the secret of its success. For example, see the waist pictured here. This design can be copied in any of the softer silks, lawnette, drap d'ete or challis, the sleeves can be of white or embroidered bands in Persian effect, the butterfly bow of the same silk as the waist or of a plain one, or deep ruffles at the elbow. The soft folds of the bodice front and back are confined by a girdle that should harmonize with revers or bands. For a medium size this pretty waist will require 4¾ yards of material 36 inches wide.

MANY GOOD BILLS AT THE THEATRES

Attractions for the Week at Boston's Many Play-houses.

FAVORITE TALENT IN ROLES

Boston Theatre.

Only four chances are left for seeing "It Happened in Nordland" at the Boston Theatre, for its short engagement comes to an end Saturday night. It is one of the most beautifully staged plays that has ever been seen here. The scenery is gorgeous and the costumes are even more so, while the groupings are so arranged as to bring out the color effects to wonderful advantage. Incidentally, there is a great deal of good fun and much pretty music. Next Monday, "The Belle of Bond Street," which was immensely successful over in London, will begin a Summer engagement. The first performance will be given as a testimonial to Napier Lothian, the veteran conductor.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Edna May's brief visit with "The School Girl" at the Hollis Street Theatre is half over, and it is evident that her departure Saturday night will be as much regretted as on the occasion of her previous engagement in this city. The delightful musical comedy is being given to a succession of crowded houses and is being accorded as much favor as ever. Next week "She Stoops to Conquer," with Eleanor Robson, Kyrle Bellew and the rest of the all star cast, will be seen at this house.

Tremont Theatre.

When the curtain falls on "Woodland" for the last time at the Tremont on Saturday night it will have been given 163 times in the city in just a little over a year. It has proved one of the most popular and successful musical shows that Manager Savage has ever offered here, and is as pretty and tuneful as it is popular. Next Monday Raymond Hitchcock will begin a return engagement in "The Yankee Consul," which was originally produced in this city.

Colonial Theatre.

The eighth and last successful week of "Humpty Dumpty" at the Colonial Theatre is drawing to a close, and only four opportunities remain for seeing the big Drury Lane spectacle. It is one of the largest and most elaborate productions that has ever been staged, and is at the same time a very attractive entertainment. There will be a concert at the Colonial on Sunday evening for the benefit of the Emergency Hospital, after which this house will be closed for the season.

Park Theatre.

Robert Edeson and "Strongheart" are still pursuing their prosperous career at the Park Theatre. Next Tuesday evening will be "Tufts Night," when a thousand students and graduates will attend. The Tufts eleven will occupy the boxes and the theatre will be decorated with the college colors. In addition to the "Strongheart" performances, there will be a series of special matinees at the Park next week, when Mrs. Sarah Cowell Le Moyne will appear in Browning's "A Blot in the 'Scutcheon" on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons.

Globe Theatre.

"The Seminary Girl" is drawing large audiences at the Globe Theatre, though Summer prices now prevail. Notwithstanding the reduction in prices, there has been no reduction in the quality of the show. Junie McCree, Knute Erickson, George Gorman, Harry Lyford and J. Francis Dooley are still dispensing the same brands of fun as on the opening night and all the popular musical numbers are being sung by the same attractive chorus.

Keith's Theatre.

Cecilia Loftus has made a hit at Keith's. She has never presented her impersonations more cleverly, and they delight as well as interest. Among the others is a very good bill are Eva Williams and Jack Tucker, in an artistic sketch; Eddie Girard and Jessie Gardner, who are very amusing; the Orpheus Comedy Four; Carlton Macey and Maud Edna Hall; and Roy Alton and Lillian Thelma.

Empire Theatre

Jessie Busley is giving a clever and artistic performance in the one-act play she is presenting at the Empire this week. Herrmann does some very mystifying feats, and some good numbers are contributed by Ray Cox, John Dempsey, the Kenyons, Arthur Sidmore and Lynn, Ott Craigo and Cartmell and Harris. It is an excellent bill from beginning to end.

Grand Opera House.

"Queen of the Highway," which is playing at the Grand Opera House this week has proved to be one of the best liked attractions of the season. Next week Lillian Mortimer will be seen at this house in "Girl of the Streets." The Grand will close its season a week from Saturday night.

Howard Athenaeum.

The approach of warm weather is making no difference in the quality of the bill at the Howard, and this week's show is one of the best of the season. Among the leading acts are those of Maddox and Prouty, Frank Cushman, Nowell and Niblo, Fritz Baker, Conroy and Gillette, the two Ashtons, George H. Diamond, the National Trio, and Cousins and Humphreys.

Castle Square Theatre.

"Magda" is drawing big audiences to the Castle Square Theatre, and an excellent performance is given. Mary Lawton's performance of the title role is worthy of high praise. Next week the popular Belasco and De Mille play, "The Charity Ball," will be presented.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Diamond King" is regarded by the patrons of the Bowdoin Square Theatre as one of the best melodramas of the season. "Ruined Lives" will be next week's offering by the stock company.

Lyceum Theatre.

Palace Theatre.

The new Summer stock company has won favor at the Palace Theatre, and in conjunction with the French Gaiety Girls is furnishing an enjoyable bill.

Columbia Music Hall.

The return of the Wine, Women and Song burlesquers at the Columbia is proving a very successful one, and Banita and her pickaninnies are making a hit.

Austin & Stone's Museum.

Banjo, the 4,500-pound Holstein bull, is still the centre of attraction at Austin & Stone's Museum. Leah May, the girl giantess, has also won a great deal of attention and, in conjunction with the many other interesting features, is responsible for an immense attendance at this resort.

GAS TRUST REALIZES ITS DEFEAT; LOBBY WILL REST

Citizens Express Appreciaton of Boston American's Fight and Give Due Credit to Organizations.

The prediction of House Chairman John N. Cole of the Committee on Public Lighting that within five years the price of gas in Boston would be reduced to eighty, or even seventy cents, as a result of the gas agitation of this year, and the passage without a dissenting vote of the gas bill to be engrossed has convinced all citizens that the Gas Trust, feeling the uselessness of further effort, will accept a capitalization at the value named in the bill and allow its high-salaried and, for the past two months, hard-working lobby to take a well-earned rest.

That the bill will pass the Senate with the same ease with which it seems to be progressing in the House is the general opinion of legislators. It has been amended slightly to perfect its provisions, one of the amendments being adopted at the suggestion of a member of the Gas Commission, who thought that he saw in the bill as drawn a loophole through which the Gas Trust might avoid the including of all its indebtedness in the capitalization.

Appreciate American's Work.

Appreciation of the energy and determination of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S battle for cheaper gas, which has at last resulted in the passage of this bill, continues to be the tenor of many letters received at this office from citizens throughout the State. Many prominent men of Boston and Massachusetts, verbally and in writing, daily congratulate the BOSTON AMERICAN upon its work.

No one seems disposed to withhold praise, either from those individuals and associations who at various times so strongly assisted and sympathized with the BOSTON AMERICAN in its uphill fight against all the strength and energy of the Gas Trust and its unlimited gas and railroad lobby—the Public Franchise League, the United Improvement Associations of Boston, the Massachusetts Board of Trade, Mayor Collins and many others.

Question is Serious.

"The BOSTON AMERICAN should be commended for its attitude and thanked by every citizen for the energy and work it has put into this effort to secure cheaper gas for Boston and a fair capitalization for the Boston gas companies," said Representative George A. Schoded of Ipswich. Representative Frederick W. Thayer of Boston said this: "This whole question is a serious one. Attempts to belittle it have failed, as they justly should. It is apparent that the BOSTON AMERICAN is the only Boston paper that is making a strenuous fight for the rights of the people, and its readers are deserving of all congratulations."

Following are other expressions of opinion regarding the result:

Unite in Giving Thanks.

Ex-Alderman Joseph I. Bienart: "The BOSTON AMERICAN has done a noble work in its fight for cheaper gas for the people. It has certainly exerted itself for a good cause, and I am sure that gratitude is appreciated."

William H. Falvey, South Boston Improvement Association: "All those who are interested in cheaper gas owe the BOSTON AMERICAN their heartfelt gratitude for the splendid work it has done toward securing for the people their rights. Personally I cannot say too much for what it has done. I bear nothing but praise for it on all sides. I am thankful that we have at least one paper that has the courage to take a firm stand against monopolies."

A. McYarish, Charlestown Improvement Association: "The BOSTON AMERICAN has made a splendid fight. It has won that it has the true interests of the people at heart, as ninety-nine out of a hundred people will acknowledge. The paper's attitude contrasts well with the apathy shown by other papers."

CASTLE SQUARE CELEBRATES

Since Opening as Stock Company Theatre 5,000 Performances Have Been Given.

There was a jubilee, a celebration and a souvenir night all rolled into one at the Castle Square Theatre on the occasion of the 5,000th consecutive performance of stock drama in that playhouse. The chief event of the evening was the reading of a poem by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, written especially to commemorate the eight years' record of the company. The house was crowded to the doors.

The Castle Square opened as a stock house on May 3, 1897, with Belasco and DeMille's "The Wife." Since that time farce has rollicked on the stage, Grand tragedy has been seen across the boards, tragedy has grimly walked, and the comic muse has in a congratulatory strain, while a little epilogue of verse written by the late poet laureate, Miss Lillian Kemble, it dealt more directly with the troubles of the players and the actual working on the stage.

Mrs. Howe's poem was read by Howell Hansel, leading man of the company, after the first act of "Magda," which is this week's offering.

Statistics are always interesting in connection with an event of this nature. Those of the Castle Square are particularly so. There have been 416 weeks during the eight years of the company at the theatre. During that time 270 plays have been presented by the company, which gives twelve performances a week. There have been 6,836 engagements presented in these plays, with 2,105 stage settings, in which 125,000 square feet of canvas were used.

The curtain has been rung up and down 63,144 times and has travelled 419 miles. The actors' time in hours of labor is 14,144. These figures constitute a record never equalled in this country by a stock organization.

DROPS CANDLE INTO VARNISH; LOSS $3,000

While painting a closet with varnish at her home, No. 44 Pleasant street, Mary Schwenck dropped a lighted candle into the varnish pot. Her dress caught fire, and as she ran from the room the burning apron set clothing on some furniture. The loss amounts to about $3,000. Miss Schwenck was not badly burned.

SMOKING IN MEN'S ROOM

JUROR TALKED; TRIAL CLOSED

Judge Holmes took from a Superior Court jury yesterday the suits of Mrs. Margaret Cottier and her daughter, for personal injuries, and that of William L. Cottier, the first-named plaintiff's husband, for loss of services, because a juror talked with the woman.

The suits are against the old Colony Street Railway Company and had been on trial two days. The juror, a Grand Army man, Mrs. Cottier in the carriage and entered into conversation with her, but did not mention the suits, except to remark that the trial would soon be over.

Judge Holmes questioned both the women and the juror and decided that the latter had been influenced only. The juror was excused for the term and another trial was ordered at the railroad attorney would not consent to go on with the case before eleven jurors.

TWO WEEKS' REST ENOUGH

President Eliot, of Harvard, favors short vacations of two weeks for students as well as business men and clerks. At a meeting to organize the new Harvard Summer camp at Squam Lake for the study of history he put himself on record on the vacation question.

"The business man has only two weeks' rest in the Summer," he said, "and no vacations at Christmas or in the Spring. That is all the student needs. The average college student takes entirely too much rest."

WORCESTER PUPILS VISIT STATE HOUSE

One hundred and twenty-five ninth grade pupils of Worcester schools, students of civil government, visited the State House yesterday in charge of Principal F. E. Bigelow. The party was conducted by Principal F. E. Mickeon of the Millbury street school. H. M. Magenis of the Quinsigamond school and Mr. Higgins of the Canterbury street school. Representative O'Rourke of Worcester, escorted the visitors.

A Life: Is It Worth While?

The proper study of mankind, a philosopher said, is man. Not man in the physical sense, for we humans, regarded merely as animals, are not half as interesting as the ornithorhyncus, for example, that Australian mammal which is a fine combination of fishfowl and fur-bearing beast. As animals we are distinctly commonplace, neither as strong nor as graceful as scores of other species. So it is the life of man, the brain of man, the habits of man, that should be the proper study of mankind.

Of course, there are many mental habits among mankind. As our copybooks used to say, "Many men of many minds"—an excellent line to copy, but one which apparently ignored the existence of many more men of no minds at all. However, among the men of mind we would call attention to one having a mind that has been shown to be capable in the rather limited sphere to which it has consecrated itself. The man is young, of irreproachable habits, enormously rich now, and destined to be perhaps the richest man in the world at the death of his father, who is already past the Scriptural limit. Names are immaterial. His life is offered as that of a type—the new-rich man's son, destined to give the lie to the old saying, "Three generations from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves," and to perpetuate our oligarchy as prudently and as remorselessly as European royal families maintain their own strictly limited trades union.

We quote the story of a day in this young man's life—a life now at the point when youthful enthusiasms and unselfish aspirations might be expected to dominate:

> His whole life has been run on a schedule that has had enough things on it to keep him going steadily.
>
> Nearly every morning he is up at 6 o'clock, and never more than a half-hour late. For two hours he breakfasts and attends to personal business, and at 9 o'clock is at his desk. From there he conducts most of his work, and he is busy seeing people on important matters and dictating letters and telegrams until 3 in the afternoon.
>
> In this time he has perhaps been speaking with his father on the private telephone or telegraph wires several times. Not until then does he lunch. This meal consists of very simple food, and is purchased in a cheap restaurant in Broad street, and eaten just as hurriedly as is the luncheon of any Wall street clerk with only a half-hour to spare.
>
> From 3:30 until 5 he is back at his desk cleaning up the day's work and making plans for the next day, when he invariably goes direct to his home and has dinner with his wife and child. Most of the evenings are spent with his wife, and sometimes, when she entertains, he plays the violin. During the day there has been more personal business accumulating, and before he goes to bed he gets this out of the way, with the aid of a secretary.
>
> In addition to all of this he studies the Bible constantly, and devotes himself to his class on Sundays and Wednesday evenings.

It is no explanation nor any excuse for a life such as this to say, as is said of this unfortunate young millionaire, that "he loves his work and finds his only happiness in it." Work, indeed, is honorable, dignified, necessary, noble. Most men hate it; let us confess that, though the confession be most unorthodox; but they hate it, as a rule, because its chief value goes to some one else—employer or other. And yet, perhaps, it is better that there should be some revolt against work in order that the finer side of life, which is best shown in the playtime of men, should have its turn.

The work of the creative artist—author, musician, poet, painter, sculptor—brings pleasure to him in the doing and pleasure to those who view the finished product. Perhaps the work of one who sits in a granite office on New York's busiest street, diligently rolling up more dollars and shrewdly wresting from others their opportunities to work, except as hirelings, may bring him pleasure, but what good does it do the world?

How ossified must be the brain that finds in this money-making grind its chief joy in life! Small wonder that it turns to Holy Writ for comfort—or in the vain hope of finding excuse.

How They Do It in Leeds

A recent document published by the Department of Commerce and Labor includes a report by Consul Walter C. Hamm on the year's financial report of the municipal street railway system at Leeds, England.

Leeds is a manufacturing town of about 450,000 people, or rather larger than Cleveland or Buffalo and smaller than Baltimore.

It owns and operates its own street railways, but has an arrangement with the private companies of the surrounding suburbs by which their cars are run over the corporation's tracks to the centre of the city. The "zone" system of fares, so popular abroad, but almost unknown here, is in vogue. According to the distance traveled, passengers pay from one to six cents each. It is difficult, if not indeed impossible, to estimate the comparative merit of this system, from the riders' viewpoint, with our system of a flat rate for six blocks or six miles, but the following figures of passengers carried in 1904-05 seem to offer suggestions:

At one cent	4,781,417
At two cents	50,778,052
At three cents	1,424,136
At four cents	6,150,880
At six cents	1,089,181
Total for the year	64,223,666

The total for this year exceeded that of the fiscal year immediately preceding by 3,484,432.

It is perfectly obvious from these figures that of more than 64,000,000 passengers carried by the Leeds municipal railways more than 63,000,000 were served at fares ranging from one to four cents. That seems rather conclusive as to the advantage of rigidly conducted municipal street railways to the passenger.

What about the effect on the taxpayer? In 1903-4 the street railroads of Leeds paid into the city treasury $260,000, after making allowances for maintenance, depreciation, sinking fund charges and interest. This year the gross receipts were $85,000 greater than last year, though the report on net earnings is not yet ready.

Can any city of 450,000 people in the United States point to equal advantages to citizen and taxpayer derived from the private ownership of street railways?

Church Society for Advancement of Labor

By Frank K. Foster

Of the many signs of the times which indicate a hopeful outlook for the labor question, the awakening interest of the clergy in the plans and hopes of organized labor is of vast importance.

During the past few years an attempt has been made by sincere and earnest men in various denominations to ascertain the reason of the spirit of aloofness which had apparently grown up in the minds of many labor leaders toward church institutions, particularly toward those in the evangelical field and in the more fashionable localities.

This quest for knowledge has been followed up by a systematic endeavor to restore the spirit of cordiality and co-operation which may well exist between two great organizations having in degree the common purpose of making the world a better one to live in for the hewers of wood and the drawers of water.

There is unfortunately little doubt but that among the wage-earners of New England the suspicion has long prevalent, more especially among the Protestant denominations—whether well founded or not is not now the question—that undue respect has been accorded by leading pulpit lights to the "man with the gold ring, clothed in purple and fine linen."

The ultra-critical utterances of trade union purposes and methods by a few of the Protestant clergy has not tended to minimize this feeling among the rank and file of working people, and they have also not been able to reconcile the policy which preached free salvation from the pulpit with that which charged fancy prices for the best pews.

Reasoning possibly from the exception to the rule, and not necessarily passing judgment upon the essentials of creed, workingmen have remained away from the Protestant churches until the empty pews have become conspicuous by their numbers.

The younger generation of the clergy, the product of a more liberal teaching in the colleges and of a closer touch with the great forces of social reform which are revolutionizing public thought, have perceived the danger and set themselves resolutely at work to remedy it, and now nearly every denomination has its especial department devoted to the study of labor conditions and for the purpose of being helpful to the organizations which the wage-earner has established for his own betterment.

During all this while the Protestant Episcopal Church has been peculiarly fortunate in maintaining a consistent democracy in its spirit toward the labor movement, and has been exempt in a remarkable degree from the alienating influences referred to.

Its clergy have as a rule kept in touch with the workaday world, and it was among the first, if not the very first, to recognize the fact that the trade union was not something to be railed at, but to be encouraged.

The Church Society for the Advancement of Labor, whose third annual convention has been in session in this city during the present week, is not an organization of sympathetic dilettante or of mere theoretical students of labor conditions. It is a practical working force, composed of both laymen and clergy, whose energies are directed along the lines of trade union effort and have thus won the entire confidence of the trade union movement.

This organization has been especially active in promoting the use of the union label, in working for the abolition of the sweat shop and child labor and in the early closing movement.

Its deliberations here have been participated in by some of the most eminent divines of the church and have been marked by a freedom of discussion, a broad tolerance and an understanding of the real needs of labor such as is all too rare in gatherings of theologians.

The local labor societies have met the advances of this association in the same frank spirit in which they have been offered, and there is no question but that a vast amount of good has been accomplished.

Conservatism, as has been remarked, are odious, but the local labor people who recollect what happened a few weeks ago, when a denominational conference, excluding reporters from its meeting, listened apparently with great gusto and assured applause to gross and malicious slanders about several national trade union officials uttered by an atrabilier representative of an employers' association, may be permitted to felicitate themselves on the entirely different spirit with which the Church Society for the Advancement of Labor has approached the question of organized labor.

Our friends of the Episcopal Church may rest assured that the memories they leave behind them among the trades unionists of Boston are grateful and will be long kept green.

ARE 100 MEN RESPONSIBLE FOR A MILLION POOR FAMILIES?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Are there 100 men in this country who are worth $100,000,000 each? If so, they are responsible for 1,000,000 starving families. Among them they have $10,000,000,000. This sum will divide by 1,000,000 just 10,000 times. Now, if this at 4 per cent interest will bring $400 a year, which is enough to provide all the necessities and some of the comforts of life to a family consisting of husband and wife and three children. Therefore, with the wealth of 100 men 1,000,000 families, or 5,000,000 of people, may be provided for.

The yearly interest of 100 fortunes would banish the bugbear of poverty from this country, and inaugurate in the United States an era of prosperity greater than it has ever known, while still leaving the capital untouched.

Heavy, indeed, is the burden that rests on the shoulders of the rich man, for he has yet to account for the blood, not of one brother, but of hundreds. Light, in comparison is the heart, and easy the conscience of the starving father of the way side or the common thief in the penitentiary, for their sins have not been too great to receive due punishment in this world.

WE ARE GLAD YOU AGREE WITH US

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your editorial article on radium as a cure for cancer was the most timely of your many remarks on that subject. Your paper is doing more to awaken an interest in that subject than any in Boston. Great advances have been made in the past few years in the cures of most every other disease, but the poor cancer patient has been given little hope.

It is surprising what little progress has been made. Why, that great British medical organization meeting in England last year to make known their discoveries for the year, admitted that in their study of cancer they were practically where they started.

In the bills before Congress last session, asking that millions be appropriated for research into various diseases, the poor cancerite was forgotten.

Let your good work go on. Let the new life be kindled by your paper in this very city, where we had nearly six hundred deaths from the dread disease in the past year.
